—Mr. and Mrs. George Meacham, Mrs. F.
L. Cu'ting and Miss Ella Cutting, arrived home Saturday night, having returned from Europe on the Pavonia. They had a rather unpleasant passage coming over, the steamer encountering several severe storms, in ladies, as a report spread about that the vessel was sinking. The next accident happened to the electric wire on the boat, which burned through the casings and set fire to the woodwork in the steerage. This gave those on board a terrible sensation,

The exercises consisted of singing by the congregation, a solo and choras, the words written for the occasion by Mr. Moore, and set to music by Rev. Mr. Gow, and recitations. A children's exercise by the Primary department followed, consisting of singing and a recitation by seven little girls. Rev. Mr. Titus made a short address, followed by some practical remarks by the Superintendent, after which the harvest offerings were made and Rev. Mr. Titus dismissed the audience with the benediction. It was voted to work for the local poor; the Channing Ward of the New England Hospital for women and children, and the Children's Mission to the children of the destitute, as usual. The Pres dent, Mrs. Horn-brooke, read a letter from Geo. Marshall in regard to a school for colored children in Barnwell. Barnwell Co., South Carolina, kept by Mrs. Mixson, formerly Miss Sylvester of this town. It was decided to further investigate the necds of the school and help it if necessary. The gentlemen were at tea as usual. It was a very full meeting for the first meeting, and all seemed to enjoy themselves, and were glad to meet together socially again.

Natural History Society.

The November meeting of the Natural History Society was a marked success. A good audience was present, and the paper by Mr. C. T. Maynard of Boston was of unusual interest, and might well send all intelligent persons, young or old, to the City Library in search of information about the civil and natural history, and the geography and social life and customs of the Bahama Islands. The postponed an-nual election also took place, with the fol-lowing result: President, Prof. J. K. Richardson, who began his duties at once as an ardson, who began his duties at once as an excellent presiding officer; Mrs. A. D. Sampson, Vice-President; S. E. Warren, Secretary; F. B. Hitchcock, Treasurer; and Jesse Fewkes, Curator. Interesting specimens of insect life were presented, and important action was initiated looking towards a suitable place for the arrangement for exhibition of the society's growing collection, and a better place for holding its meetings.

for exhibition of the society's growing collection, and a better place for holding its meetings.

Dr. Frisbie made the following remarks, and the accompanying resolutions wave passed:

Frederick Jackson is dead. He has passedlaway since our last meeting. He was one of the original members of the Newton Natural Heavey Society; was with us when it was organized was the first secretary and held that office for more than few years, till his removal from this city. He was a rare man whose knowledge was wonderful for its depth and variety. While he did not consider himself a scientific man, his scientific attainments showed wide study and research. He was an active member of this society, zealous in his efforts to promote its success and usefulness and retained his interest in it after his removal to a distant state. While superintendent of the Newton Free Library he aided much in perfecting it in all its parts, adding toir rare, valuable and to, "abb beeks, thoroughly investigating libraries and library such a meaning the second property of the second property in the s friendship and esteem, and that we extend to his wildowed wife and orphan children our heartfelt sympathies in their great loss and bereavement.

The Indian Preacher and Singers.

Our people are to have the opportunity of hearing from some representatives of the Sioux tribe next Wednesday evening as advertised in another column. The Sioux preacher and singers aroused so much interest in Chicago that all the time they can spend in the East was engaged before they reached here, but the interest of Newton has been remembered and an evening given to us.

Novelties in Cloaks.

Novelties in Cloaks.

Those who wish the latest novelties in fall and winter cloaks, should consult Messrs. Springer Brothers, at their cloak emporium, Chauney and Essex streets, Boston. It is a well-known fact that they have a larger assortment than any other house in Boston, and one can always be sure of finding there the latest styles in such garments, at a reasonable price. They are constantly receiving importations from Europe, and also have a fine assortment of their own celebrated make. As they offer cloaks from '$1 up to $400 it will be seen that every taste and pocke can be suited. They have plash sacques, and all kinds of wraps in seadskin and other furs, and an immense variety of jackets, nistancies with hoods and capes, etc.

City Government.

The board of Aldermen met Monday night, every member being present. His Honor, Mayor Kimball presided. There were a number of spectators present, among them the officers of the Newton Electric and Street Railway companies, and it seemed to be expected that something important would come before the board before the evening was over. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which the usual routine business was transacted.

Mr. Henry Ross, Superinterdent of the Newton business was transacted.

Mr. Henry Ross, Superintendent of the Newton Cemeteries, submitted his report, which showed that $200 had been expended in the care of the cemeteries, repairing walls, resetting tombstones, etc., and an appropriation of $400 for the coming year would be needed; $200 for the salary of superintendent and appropriation. etc., and an appropriation of $400 for the coming year would be needed; $200 for the salary of superintendent, and $200 for work that was needed in repairing tombs, etc. There have been six interments during the year in the Centre street cemetery, 7 in the Newton Cemetery lot, and one in the Winchester street cemetery. The cemetries are reported to be in satisfactory condition.

Licenses were granted to C. P. Harkins, to move building across Washington street; to John Beal, to creet a stable 20 by 30 on Washington street, Ward 2; to Nonantum Worsted Company to creet barn 60 by 70, on Bridge street, Ward 2; to C. A. Kingsbury, to erect two green houses on Hammond street; to the Newton Electric Light Hammond street; to the Newton Electric Light and Power Company, to put 120 horse power engine and boiler into their engine house on Crafts street; to J. E. Billings, to put a six horse power boiler and engine into his culer mill on the Ranney estate, Winchester street. H. H. Hunt gave notice of his intention to erect a house on Webster street, Ward 3, 24 1-2 by 36 1-2 feet; B. M. Kattelle, to crect a house 36 by 48 feet, on Putnam street, Ward 3; and James Ford, two houses on Lexington street, Auburndale, each 25 by 40 feet. The notices were filed, as the board has given up the useless formality of granting licenses for dwelling houses, where they have no option in the matter.

Hearings were held on the petitions of Mr. Bil-lings for a six horse power engine and boiler, and of the Electric Light company, for a 120 horse power engine, but no one appeared and the hear-ing ways closed.

Alderman Dearborn presented petitions of L. E. Leland, and 150 other residents of Ward 4; of Chas. F. Hollis and 70 other citizens of Ward 5, in aid of the petition of the Newton Street Railway Company.

An amended petition of the Newton Street Railway Company was presented, asking for a right oway on Washington street, from Woodland Station to Newton Lower Falls, to the Wellesley line.

Alderman Dearborn also presented a petition rom 164 residents of Ward 1, in aid of the petition

Alderman Pettee, from the committee on the Fire Department, presented a report, recommending that the placing of any electric light wires on fire alarm telegraph poles, should be strictly prohibited by ordinance. The report was referred to the committee on ordinances. Alderman Pettee said that the electric wires were so heavily charged with electricity, that if any of the fire department workmen should come in contact with them in ordinance the alarm wires the shock with them. with them in reparing the alarm wires, the shock would be fatal. If the electric wires should touch would be tatal. If the electric wires should touch the fire alarm wires, the latter would become charged, and not only ruin the the fire department apparatus, but would be apt to cause destructive fires. Chief Bixby of the fire department had in-vestigated the matter, and would make a further in the second process of the fire department had investigated the matter, and would make a further report.

Mr. Bixby stated that he had made inquiries, and had gained information from other sources, one being the address of Prof. Barrett, the chief engineer of Chicago, at the recent convention in Providence. There had been numerous instances of the destruction of fire alarm apparatus, by the wires coming in contact with electric wires. In Lowell the repeater, costing $1500, had been partially destroyed by such an accident, and others of like nature were reported from Providence, Boston, and nearly every city where electric wires were used. One great danger in Newton would be that of fire in the bell towers, the electricity would cause the fire alarm wires to melt, and dropping upon the wooden floors, would ignite them; fires in such a place would be very difficult to get at. The electric company should be limited to its own poles, and the greatest care taken to prevent any possibility of aheir wires tonching the alarm wires. This had been done by the fire commissioners of Boston.

Alderman Pettee read an order for the payment of election officers, which was passed.

An order was presented, authorizing the Water Board to buy 75 tons of 6 inch pipe, at an expense not to exceed $5,000, and to charge the same to the Water Construction account. The pipe was needed, Alderman Pettee explained, for immediate use, in order to supply orders already passed, and others to be passed for the extension of the water service, and the money was on hand for its payment. Another order was passed, authorizing the board to contract for 600 tons of water pipe, to be delivered in the spring of 1887. The pipe wan leave to go to the legislature to get permission to complete the purchase. The water board think it better to do this, because if it is known that they have such a large contract to place, they can secure much better terms for the 75 tons that are needed now. The warrant for the city election was read and ordered published.

The warrant for the city election was read and ordered published.

Alderman Nickerson presented an order stating that the town of Needham had contributed its share of $.90 towards the rebuilding of Kenrick's bridge, and recommending that it be added to the flood account, and applied to the payment of the bridge contract, which was done.

The Highway Committee reported on the petition for the laying out and acceptance of Waswall street, recommending that it be granted, as there were as damages asked, and none awarded. An order was passed, appointing Monday, December, 6th, at 8 p. m., as the date for a hearing on the caying out and grading of the street, from Cross to Parsons street, and Dec., 13th, at 8 p. m., for a hearing before the Common Council.

No one appeared at the Emerson street hearing, and an order was passed for its laying out and acceptance as a public street, from Pearl to Boyd street.

The Highway Committee reported on the petition of the Lower Falls citizens, asking the city to pay for the balance of the contract for repairing the foot bridge, 864, and the petitioners were granted leave to withdraw. It was understood at the time the appropriation was voted, that the Lower Falls people would make up the balance by contributions.

A number of bills for small amounts were reported and approved.

Alternau Mason presented the report of the committee on printing, and recommending that the committee of printing, and recommending that the committee of printing, and of the Coverseers of the Poor and Health Officer, and 1300 of the Newton Free Library, 500 of the Gverseers of the Board. It was explained that more water board reports were needed, as 309 had to be sent to other water boards. It was also recommended that the school committee have their reports in cluded in the contract. The recommendations were adopted.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

Alderman Dearborn created a sensation by moving that the committee on licenses be discharged from further consideration of the Newton street railway petition, without being required to make a report, in orier to bring the matter up, and get some expression from the full board.

Mayor Kimball said that he thought the City Solicitor should be present, if anything was done in the matter, and he bad sent to him, requesting his presence at the meeting, but unfortunately he was of town.

Alderman Nickerson presented a petition in factor of the company, signed by J. T. Allen and 182 other residents of Ward 3.

The railway matter was temporarily deferred, as the petition of the Electric Light Company came up, and it was stated that the company had plans to submit, showing the location of every pole. A recess was taken to give the members an opportunity to inspect the plans.

After the recess, Alderman Dearborn stated that the Electric company were not prepared with the written statement of the location and size of poles, required by their petition, and the plans were referred to the City Engineer, Superintendent of the Fire Department, and the Superintendent of the Streets, with instruction to report at the next regular meeting of the board, Nov. 15th.

The street railway matter then came up again, Alderman Dearborn moving that the petition be brought before the board for consideration. At the request of Aldermen Grant and Fiske, the original petition and the two amended petitions were read. It was found that the amended petition did not omit Auburn street, and President Parker said that this was a mistake, as the company were willing to omit it, and a statement to that effect was inserted.

Alderman Dearborn said he thought it was due to the company that they should know something of what the board would do in regard to the petition as amended be granted, subject to such ordinances, rules and regulations, as the board might make, or caus wome certainty give an opportunity for the board to put itself on record, the company had gone to a good deal of expense, and were entitled to some. Consideration Mason presented a letter from C. S. Davis of Newton Centre, strongly advocating the granting of the petition, and enclosing a communication from A. D. S. Bell, statung that while for selfish reasons he might prefer to have the streets free from railroad tracks, yet for the sake of High School pupils, servants and poor people generally, who desired a cheap means of transit to and from school and church, he favored granting the petition, and thought that five years after the road began running no one would be willing to do without it. Mr. Pavis's letter was signed by eighteen others, some of whom had signed other petitions against the road.

Alderman Pettee failed to see the need of passing the order at once; the company did not intend to go to work this month, or next month either, and there was no pressing necessity for haste. It would be better to discuss the ordinances necessary first, and find out more about the plans of the company. Alderman Nickerson touched upon a tender subject by asking if the petition asked for a hore railroad or an electric ruliroad.

Mayor Kimball replied that nothing was said about the motive power.

Newtonville Woman's Guild.

The second meeting of the Guild was held at the house of Mrs. Wm. Claffin, on Tuesday evening of last week. The first of a course of lectures on "The Poetry of Science" was given by Mr. Geo. Makepeace Towle. The lecturer began by saying that the subject announced did not quite cor-rectly represent his lectures, which were to the subject announced did not quite correctly represent his lectures, which were to treat of inventions. Not that he intended to describe complicated machinery. He means to speak of the personality of the great inventors, rather than of the results of their labors. Quoting Carlyle's scathing description of man's contemptible stature and attitude among animals, the lecturer went on to show how immeasurably man is lifted above all other animals by his tool-producing faculty. He carried his listeners back in imagination to the infancy of savage races, and showed us how early the faculty of invention must have been brought into play, and how continuously. Earliest of all inventors whose inventions have come clearly down to us, stands Archimedes, to whom the Syracusans have recently erected a tardy statue, more than 2,000 years after his death. Many instances were given of the fact that most of the inventions of the present day were anticipated in ancient times—some of the most striking being the recommendation of ether to produce insensibility to pain by Albertus Magnus; the experiments in photography of the many-sided Leonardo da Vinci, and the startling predictions of some of the greatest inventions of modern times by Roger Bacon. The first conception of many inventions is unknown. No one knows who first devised the watch. It is continually happening that the same invention is produced simultaneously by different persons, living far apart, and working quite without knowledge of each other. There were five claimants for the invention of the steamboat. It was noted how often accidents have led the way to inventions of the utmost importance, but that these accidents never happened to common men—always to those whose minds were profoundly at work. This was illustrated by the invention of the Galvanic battery, by Galvani; of the Argand lamp, by Argand; of the balloon by the Mongolfier brothers; of the balloon by the Mongolfier brothers; of the balloon by the Mongolfier brothers; of the balloon by the Mongolfier brothe treat of inventions. Not that he intended Tickets for the remaining three lectures cau be had for $1.00, at Williams' drugstore. The lectures will be given at the house of Mrs. John L. Roberts, Nov. 23; at Mrs. H. H. Carter's, Dec. 14; at Mrs. D. C. Heath's, Jan. 11—commencing at 8 o'clock.

The Cup of Cold Water.

If any one can tell where a wheelman or If any one can tell where a wheelman or other wayfarer can get a drink of water in the City of Newton, without asking for it, he will confer a favor, besides checking the sale of unhealthy and demoralizing substitutes. There is nothing like pure, cold water to a healthy appetite, but if there is none to be had, (except from horse-troughs) one is obliged to take the next thing. Is it not a shame, in these prohibition times, that there is no free drinking place between Malden and Dedham, and between Boston and Framingham? The towns that lie between are on the map; The towns that lie between are on the map; wheelmen fly through them without stop-ping to trace boundary lines; all they know the old wooden pumps are gone.
Out of the thousands of dollars spent every year on temperance words, let us have a few hundred, here and there, on temperance deeds.

"He shall drink of the brook by the way," says the scripture, "and therefore shall he lift up the head."

We have no objection to brook water, but brooks are very scarce, and can't be made to order. Hydrants are shut off from October to May. Hundreds of teamsters pass through Newton daily, and drink beer in preference to any hydrant water, but they would take cold water in most cases if they could get it, and let the beer and soda water alone.

Perchauce, this may meet the eye of some liberal-minded citizen who has a small balance, or could make one, to the credit of his "charity account," waiting for a worthy public object to appear. To such a one, we commend this subject of the "cup of cold water." in all its physical, moral, social and political aspects, leaving him to set the example of doing something practical in the cause of temperance.

Out in the public square, or elsewhere, let him get leave to sink or drive a well till he gets a flow of pure, cold water. Put in a stout, plain wooden pump, that shall work in winter and summer; cover it with a canopy like the one in Canton, Mass. Place it under the protection of the civil authorities. Let the donor's name or modest initials be inscribed thereon, and begin this fall.

November Magazines.

November Magazines.

The place of honor in the November Atlantic is occupied by a clever story by Josiah P. Quiney, entitled, "The Peckster Professorship," which treats a question of the day and will attract much attention. Mr. Percival Lowell contributes "A Kocean Coup d'Etat," and Mr. John Fiske has a paper on the "Germs of National Sovereignty in the United States." The third paper of the serial. "French and English," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton, is marked by the interest which distinguishes everything that he writes. Besides these, Mr. Henry Yan Brunt's article on Richardson, the architect, will be read by his many friends and admirers with special interest. Miss Murfree and Mr. Bishop continue their serial stories; there is a charming paper entitled "Wood-Fears," and some poetry by Andrew Hedbrooke, Lucy Larcom, and Margaret Deland. "The Blind Man's World," a sketch by Edward Bellamy, should not be forgotten. And there are besides the usual criticisms, the Contributor's Club, the Books of the Month. The number as a whole is one of unusual excellence, and sustains the high standard which The Atlantic always ests for itself." Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

his favorite grand-children, and the new volume starts off with a promise of being even better than the last, if that were pos-sible.

B. Lothrop & Co. announce that, leading in the great literary movement towards lower prices and larger sales, they have made, without reducing quantity or quality, an extraordinary reduction in the price of Wide Awake, the best illustrated young folks' magazine (1000 quarto pages and 500 original pictures yearly), and will now receive subscriptions at the former wholesale price of only $2.40 a year.

ceive subscriptions at the former wholesale price of only $\frac{2}{3}.40$ a year.

The "Overland Monthly" for November contains Judge John H. Boalt's very important article upon the Silver Question.
President Holden, of the State University, contributes a scientific article—"Photography the Servant of Astronomy," with especial reference to the Lick Observatory plan of making photography a specialty of Pacific Coast work. The "Overland Monthly's" new serial of Southern California begins in this November number, and is entitled, "In the Sleepy Hollow Country," by S. V. Sheridan, Jr. It is a story of the Ojai region and the Potrero La Carpa.
Leonard Kip tells a pathetic story of the mines—"Little Biddeford;" and a new writer—EdwardIngle—contributes a romantic tale of Raleigh's Lost Colony.
Among the sketches is a most graphic account of Tombstone, Arizona. The Mexican heroines, "Chata and Chinita," arrive at another chapter in their eventful history. This story has attracted favorable attention from the best critics.

The November Century marks a new cra at another chapter in their eveniful history. This story has attracted favorable attention from the best critics.

The November Century marks a new era in the history of that magazine, in beginning the publication of "The Life of Lincoln," by his private secretaries, John G. Nicolay and Colonel John Hay. Two prefaces, one editorial and the other by the writers, give ample account of the work, and call attention to the exceptional opportunities which these gentlemen have had to prepare what is certain to be the fullest and most authoritative work on the subject. Its authors were, in a sense, the chosen biographers of Lincoln, by whose aid they were re-enforced in the collection of material during the war. From an historical point of view the value of the work—largly resting on documentary evidence not attainable by other writers—must be ranked high. In fact, the inner history of the war waits upon this work. Mr. Theodore Rosewelt contributes a paper of prime importance on the "Machine Politics of New York City." Such articles will do good, and the Century is a good channel in which to bring them out. Mr. Richard T. Auchmuty takes up a great and pressing question in the illustrated paper on "The Need of Trade Schools." Mr. Frank R. Stockton begins his new novel, "The Hundredth Man," which starts off well. Mr. B. E. Martin is the author of a delightful paper on "Old Chelsea," which will be finished in the December number, and Mr. Charles Waldstein contributes a carefully prepared paper on classical art, under the title of "The Temple of the Ephesian Artemis and the Ancient Silver Patera from Bernay." The military papers still occupy a large amount of space and do not lose their interest. The poetry of the number is unusually good, particularly Mr. Andrew Lang's 'Clevedon Church." The editorials, the open letters, and the brica-brac are each well sustained departments, and the whole number is as good as most careful editing can make it. [The Century November. New York.

The combination, proportion, and process in pre-paring Hood's Sarsaparilla are peculiar to this med-icine, and unknown to others.

The First Keen Twinge

As the season advances, the pains and aches by which rheumatism makes itself known, are experienced after every exposure. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a specific for rheumatism—we doubt if there is, or can be, such a remedy. But the thousands benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla, warrant us in urging others who suffer from rheumatism to take it before the first keen twinge.

A Common Cold

Is often the beginning of serious affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold or Cough.

Last January I was attacked with a severe Cold, which, by neglect and frequent exposures, became worse, finally settling on my lungs. A terrible cough soon followed, accompanied by pains in the chest, from which I suffered intensely. ### TWO MONTHS FREE

To new subscribers, the GRAPHIC will be sent from this date to Jan. 1, 1888, on receipt of $2, the price of a year's subscrption. The circulation of the GRAPHIC has doubled during the past six months, and there is a good prospect that it will be doubled again before the year is out.

THE GRAPHIC'S GROWTH.

THE GRAPHIC is five columns larger than last week-an addition of two inches to every page giving that amount of extra The increase is rendered necessary by the demands upon our advertising columns, which have caused the leaving out of from two to five columns of reading matter for the past two months, and even with this increase in size we are unable to give this week several communications and contributions, which have had to stand over for another week. With its unusually wide columns, the GRAPHIC is enabled to give as much reading matter on a page as most of the six column papers, and the extra width give advertisers an advantage which they are willing to pay for.

We do not believe in a paper's publishing elaborate puffs of itself in every issue, as some otherwise excellent papers do, but perhaps a few words of a personal character may not be out of place here. The GRAPHIC has entered upon its 15th year, with a larger patronage than ever before in its history. Its circulation has doubled during the past six months, and the increase in its list of readers still keeps up every week seeming from a dozen to thirty new names on our subscription book, while the sales at the various news rooms are steadily growing. It is hoped to double the circulation again in the coming six months, and to that end we have made the offer which appears at the head of the editorial columns. We do not believe in offering chromos or other premiums in order to secure new subscribers, and have so far found it unnecessary. The most gratifying fact about the growth of the GRAPHIC is that it has not been in the nature of a boom, but a sure and steady affair, which promises to continue as long as it offers substantial attractions to its readers.

THE STATE ELECTION.

The result of the election in this state ought to be a warning to the Republican party, that if they wish to retain control in Massachusetts, they must look more care-fully to their nominations. The policy of putting up weak men, and trusting to the prestige of the party to pull them through, is a dangerous one, and another time the majority may be whittled down to less than nothing. Only a little over 9,000 Re-publican majority in Massachusetts is startpublican majority in Massachusetts is start-ling evidence of the need of a change in the policy of the party. It is all very well to talk about the brilliancy of the past record of the party, but the voters are in-terested in the questions of to-day, and judge a party by the character of the men it nominates. The day has about gone by when a Republican nomination is equiva-lent to an election. We do not think a Re-publican politician can be found who will publican politician can be found, who will say that if such a man as Hon. W. W. Crapo had been nominated for governor. his maintry would have Crapo had been nominated for governor, his majority would have been only 9,000. The campaign orators would then have been able to make more than a passing ref-serence to the candidate, and the Republi-can papers would not have kept such an almost unanimous silence in regard to the head of the ticket. The little ring of poli-ticians who appear to have taken the contract for running the Republican party, have evidently taken upon their hands a bigger job than they can manage. They seem to act upon the principle after us the deluge," and grab what preferment they can while scuttling the ship. There was a great cry in the early days of the campaign, about making way for the young men of the party, and retiring the old leaders, but if the old and experienced leaders are not called back to the management, there will soon be no party left worth managing.

CONGRESSMAN BURNETT.

Newton gave Congressman Ely a much larger vote than two years ago, which is an endorsement from which Mr. Ely ought to derive some satisfaction in his defeat. Had other sections of the district done as well Mr. Barnett would not have been elected The margin was a very narrow one, however, and this is not yet a solid Democratic district. The people will watch Mr. Burnett closely, and if he is not an improvement upon his predecessor, he will be retired at the end of his term. It is no secret that Mr. Elv's requesting was not conthat Mr. Ely's renemination was not considered advisable by the majority of Newton people, as the weakness of his record was acknowledged, but he was supported because he seemed to be a stronger man than his opponent. The result shows that Republicans should put forward their very strongest men in this district, if they want to win, for the Democrats stand ready to take advantage of every mistake.

We hope that Mr. Burnett will prove a better Congressman than his speech at the City Hall would indicate, and that he will display all the independence and conscient tiousness which have been credited to him by his admirers. He has his future before bim, and his action during his coming term in Congress will make or mar it. It is an opportunity which comes but once in a life-time, and his political fortune depends upon himself. The devotion of personal friends can elect a man, but his fate after that depends upon the man himself. If Mr. Burnett proves equal to the occasion, he will find the voters of this district ready and willing to give him credit for whatever is worthy and honorable in his public ca-reer. They will not be satisfied, however, with a representative who is a mere nonen tity in Congress.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES

Newton can well congratulate itself upon its representatives this year, as Messrs. Wood and Walworth will make a strong team, and will see that the interest of Newton are protected. Mr. Wood, from his experience in legislative matters, will be especially valuable, and will be able to take a leading position from the start. His personal popularity is shown by his vote in his own ward, where both parties seem to have joined in supporting him, while his large vote in the other wards. while his large vote in the other wards shows that his services in the past are appreciated.

Mr. Walworth, although a new man, is so well known in business and social circles, that he will have an extensive accles, that he will have an extensive acquaintance among the members, and he has many qualities which especially fit him for the duties he will have to perform. His own ward gave him a hearty endorsement, and to the older residents it is a matter of pride that Newton has chosen a representative of two prominent families, which have for so many years been identified with the city.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

The objection to granting a location for the tracks of the Newton Street Railroad, on condition of the use of electricity only as a Newton power, appears to be a valid one. Electric railways sometimes meet with accidents, and think what the result would be with a car left halfway between Newtonville and Newton Centre. It could not be propelled by horse power or even by man power, and the car would have to stay where it stopped until the electricity was started up again, which might be in a few hours or weeks, as the case might be. Alderman Mason has pre-sented the most sensible suggestion yet made to the board of Alderman, and that is, to grant the company the right to lay a section of track, where they could present a working model of their road. Then it could be seen just how much of an obstrac tion the road would be. At present the ideas in regard to the details connected with the road are very hazy, and no one outside of the company seems to know anything about the matter. Alderman Mason recommended Washington street for the model, which is certainly far enough from the Centre, and Newton Corner people would recommend that portion of the street from West Newton to Newtonville, as, judging from the petitions, every man and boy in that section wants the road.

THE BOSTON RECORD professed to be shocked at the Graphic's suggestion that Sherman Hoar, if elected, would probably vote for Senator Dawes, and that the friends of the Senator would gain a vote if Mr. Hoar was elected. The Record intimated that it would be a terrible thing for a United States Senator to be elected by anything resembling a Democratic vote, from which we infer that Congressman Long has changed his views since he was last a candidate. There was certainly a plan then to elect him over Senator Hoar by the aid of Democratic votes, and it was not the fault of Mr. Long's friends that the plan was not carried out.

THE Waltham delegates, who threatened in the Republican Senatorial convention, that if they were not allowed their own way, Waltham would give a Democratic majority, appear to have done nothing after all. They dictated a candidate, and then were unable to carry their own city for him. Waltham Republicans had bet-ter take a back seat in conventions here-after, as they appear able to do nothing towards electing a candidate.

THE SATURDAY EVENING GAZETTE has this interesting bit of information: "The Newton people say, that there is no doubt of the re-nomination and re-election of Mayor Kimball, of that city. He receives very largely the votes of both parties. "It follows the announcement with "real estate advances in Newton," as though the two statements had some definite connection.

CHAIRMAN POWERS, of the Congressional committee of this district, is certainly en-titled to credit for the manner in which he managed the campaign in his own city, Mr. Ely's majority rose from about 80 two years ago to over 300 this year.

SENATOR-ELECT FLETCHER celebrated his election and his golden wedding on Wednesday evening at his home in Bel-mont, with the aid of a large and brilliant company of friends.

A MAN must have been very hard to suit, if he could not extract at least a grain of comfort from the election returns. There was something to please all parties.

The state election is over, and now comes the real event of the year, the city

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

Below will be found the votes in the dif-ferent wards of Newton and the totals. It is an interesting statement and will repay study. It shows that the voters of Newton quite generally exercised their right to scratch their tickets as they thought best, as very few of the candidates received ex-actly the same number of votes. Mr. Brackett seems to be more popular here than Mr. Ames, while the rest of the Re-publican State ticket runs ahead of either publican State ticket runs ahead of either of them. In the second, third and sixth wards, the vote on representatives is especially interesting. Mr. Heath ran far ahead of any one on the ticket, and it is said that a great many of the voters there pasted Mr. Heath's "stickers" over both of the Republican candidates. Mr. Heath cannot complain that his politics render him unpopular in his own ward. In the third and sixth wards. Messrs Wood and Walworth sixth wards, Messrs. Wood and Walworth found friends in both parties. In the fifth the Democrats appear to have gained com-plete control. The returns are as follows:

The Emergency Lectures.

The Emergency Lectures.

The course of emergency lectures which have been secured by Mayor Kimball's efforts, for the benefit of the members of the police force and fire department, promises to be of great benefit not only to the police but to the city. Dr. R. P. Loring is not only a skillful physician, but an interesting lecturer, and those who were present at the first of the course, Monday afternoon, in the Council Chamber at the City Hall, were impressed with the close attention paid him, and the practical way in which he illustrated his directions for giving aid to the wounded. Every officer on the force was present, together with the Mayor, the City Marshal. City Clerk Kingsbury, Auditor Otis, Engineer Noyes, Chief Bixby, and a number of the fire department officials. Dr. Loring was provided with a model boy, a set of charts showing the circulation of the blood, a skeleton, and an assortment of bandages. He began by giving a brief description of the human body, illustrating his remarks by the skeleton and charts; an outline of the circulation, showing points where it may be controlled by digital pressure; the pulse and respiration in child and adult, and the triangular, the four-tailed and the roll bandages. The object of the lecture, he stated, was solely to teach people how to keep their presence of mind and to render the right kind of assistance in cases of accident or other emergency until a physician arrives. He showed on the model how to their presence of mind and to render the right kind of assistance in cases of accident or other emergency until a physician arrives. He showed on the model how to apply the triangular and four-tailed bandages in wounds of the head, face, neck and chest; and after the lecture, the pupils were required to demonstrate in turn how to apply the bandages; none of them were very skillful at first, of course, but under the directions of the lecturer, and of Mr. L. E. G. Green, who has already taken a course of the lectures, remarkable progress was made, and by the close of the hour, some of the men could adjust a bandages with the dexterity of a professional. Three more lectures will be given, and at the close of the course there will be an examination—those who pass will be given the certificate of the Massachusetts Emergency and Hygienic Association.

Boston Improvements.

Boston Improvements.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

The project of widening and extending Commonwealth Avenue, and the widening of Beacon street to Chestnut Hill reservoir, will prove a great evest for Newton. The plan is for two roads nearly parallel, and very broad, say 150 to 200 feet, with termination at the Boston reservoir. One is the extension of Commonwealth Avenue over Beacon street, through Brookline. The other a widening of Brighton Avenue from Beacon street to Massachusetts Avenue, now opening on the mile ground through verant lands to the reservoir. One of the enterprises will doubtless be carried through as an analyday, and both ultimately, bringing large tracts of land into market, to the great relief of the Back Bay. On these considerations it is doubtful where the enterprise carried out will prove of wast consideration to East Newton and Newton Centre and at no very distant day a similar enterprise will be entered into to connect Newton with the mile ground by a wide capacious road, opening large tracts of land for an outlet for the pent-up population of Boston. Let a broad avenue run from Newton to Boston, with an elevated steam power, or an electric power, or even horse railroad power, and greater things are accomplished for this city than we have yet seen.

The projects are all worthy of profound consideration, both by individual capital and city corporation authorities.

The tendency of the overflowing growth of Boston is Newtonward, and the dividing line between the two cities is only some half mile from the most thickly settled part of our city.

The time for all this is of course conjectural, but it will come.

Mr. Holway welcomed them home in a very pleasant speech, and said he had been commissioned to present to them a little reminder from their friends. He then handed each a handsome little jar, which contained about $130 in gold. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith were called upon to respond, and the evidence of the esteem and affection of their friends was so unexpected that they were rather unprepared with speeches, but they made happy replies, and the evening was passed in congratulations and in a social manuer. A fine supper was served, and the affair was a very successful and pleasant surprise party.

Followed by a discussion.

—A few evenings since an experiment was tried of substituting wood for coal by one of our prominent families. As supposed, it was left safe at night, and no danger apprehended; the next morning upon awaking, the family discovered the odor of smoke, and descending found it fast filling the rooms below. Investigation in the celar found the timbers about the chimney in a light blaze and the fire already working its way between the plastered ceiling and the room above, as well as through the upward partition into the second story. By the aid of a Johnson hand-pump and two or three pails of water, the fire which in a half hour later would have been past control, was quickly extinguished. It is supposed that it was caused by the over heated bricks resting upon the woodwork below, and the fire-place not properly constructed for the use of wood.

—In the death of Miss Mabel Harding, who died in Newport, Oct. 20th, no ordinary earthly ties were severed. The latter part of her lile was mostly spent with relatives in Philadelphia, so that she was not so intimately known here; but in the intervals of time she passed in West Newton, she identified herself with the Congregational church, and in the Young People's Society especially took an active part, leading in all mission work, and winning the high regard of all with whom she associated. Possessed of more than usual personal attractions and social accomplishments, the higher graces also of a Christian spirit were united. In the last few months of her life, though a victim of a wasting and suffering disease, never was a murmur heard to escape her lips, and though expressing a desire for life if it was best, acknowledging the more than usual attractions it possessed for her. she was ready when the Master called to leave, and was an example of sublime heroism in bearing her more than ordinary sufferings. "I am coming!" was the joyful exclamation to the beckoning ones, as she passed "I am coming!" was the joyful exclama-tion to the beckoning ones, as she passed beyond.

—At the meeting of the Women's Educational Club held Friday, Oct. 29th, "Summer Outings," by members of the club were read. The first, a "Summer Outing" on Mount Prospect, also pleasant reminiscences of a jaunt over heights in Germany, by Mrs. Carter; Mrs. Dr. Crockett gave an interesting account of a visit to a life-saving station at Provincetown; Mrs. Perrin, a visit to Copp's burying-ground, also Christ church; and Miss Cushman of Newtonville, one of her characteristic papers on Natural History—on ants; Mrs. Sampson closing with a visit to the Adirondacks, in her usual happy vien. Mrs. Washington, a graduate of Hampton Normal School, was then introduced by Mrs. Walton, and spoke in the interest of a Normal school in Tuskeege, the Southern part of Alabama. It was established in 1881, contains now over 300 pupils, and is doing a great educational work in that part of the South. Fifty dollars constitutes a scholarship, and a committee was chosen to discuss plans for raising that amount among the members of the club. The next meeting will be held Nov, 12th, when an interchange of visits will be made by the Educational Club of Malden, and papers given by their members.

—The annual sale of fancy goods, aprons, etc., held at the Baptist Chapel, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 27 and 28th, notwithstanding the bad weather, was a decided success. Under the deft finger of Messrs, Gosline, Tate, Howell, and Barbour, the vestries were made very attractive by a graceful arrangement of flags and streamers, and Chinese lanterns. There was a fancy goods table under the management of Mesdames Putnam, Secomb, Rowe and Fisher, and a second under the care of Mrs. Imman's class of young Misses. Both were generously furnished, and remunerative to the extent that almost no articles were left over at the close of the saie. The apron table was in charge of Mrs. Tuttle, Leland, Davenport and Lucas, who disposed of over two hundred aprons of almost every variety and style, from the coarse strong covering used by the calpenter, to the delicate muslin so agreeable to the ladies, for afternoon dress in their homes. The cake-tables were in charge, the one of the boys of the Sunday School, and the other of Miss Dyke, Mrs. Burdon, and Mrs. F. Inman. The former abundantly attested the masculine ability in culinary arts, and suggested how possible it might be for all mothers and sisters to lessen their cares in the kitchen, by turning them over at once to their sons and brothers. The confectionary department was wholly supplied by Mr. H. Putnam, and dispensed by Mrs. Burrison and Mrs. Leland, There was a Japanese Toy Table, furnished by Mrs. E. Secomb and aughter, and presided over by Miss Bertha Secomb of Brooklyn, N. Y., in costume. Her character was complete in all of its details, and her sales added not a little to the revenues both evenings. There was also a faithful representation of "the Old Woman who lived in her Shoe," by the little Misses Mary and Gracie Barbour, who disposed of very many "dollies" from their quaint mansion. The ice cream room was under the direction of Miss Annie Briggs of Auburndale, who called to her effective aid a large corps of assistants, representing the young beauty of the congregation and Sunday School. Thus far the net proceeds amount the ladies return their sincere thanks to all who favored them by their presence or patronage.

Davidson's, Maple street, at 7.30, Wednesday evening, Nov. 17th.

—Rev. Mr. Newhall's subject on Sunday, was "God dwelleth not in temples made with hands." He referred to savage idolatry, and to that of a more refued type, and demonstrated very forcibly the truth that the heart of the true Christian is God's dwelling place. The musical service in the evening consisted of several anthems, a duet and a trio for female voices, all of which were very well sung. Mrs. Phipps sang the solo by Ambrose, "One sweetly solem thought." Mr. and Mrs. Kendall sang, "I saw a golden sunbeam fall," and Mrs. Mann sang with Mrs. Kendall and Mrs. Phipps, the tr.o, "Saviour breathe an evening blessing." A Te Deum and Jubilate by Dudley Buck, and "Rock of Ages," by the same author, with several stirring convergational hymns completed a programme which was most enjoyable from first to last. The enthusiasm and the carnest labor of Dr. Tourgee, formed years ago in this congregation the habit of hearty singing of the familiar hymns, and it will be long before they fall back into the life-less method of singing which takes all enjoyment from a praise service.

Lasell Notes.

On Monday morning Mrs. Lincoln gave valuable instructions to the second class on the boiling of potatoes and preparing them in several ways. The class were divided in their answer to the question whether potatoes should be put into boiling or cold water. Mrs. Lincoln preferred boiling water, except in the case of potatoes which are very hard in the centre. She also pared the potatoes for the reason that an acrid juice is in and under the skin which is not nalatable or healthful. She also pared the potatoes for the reason that an acrid juice is in and under the skin, which is not palatable or healthful. An excellent hash was prepared with part of the boiled potatoes, using twice as much potato as meat. Potato soup was made by boiling a stalk of celery in a pint of milk and adding three boiled potatoes and a spoonful of chopped onion with salt and pepper. The whole was rubbed through a colander and thickened with a tablespoonful of flour in a tablespoonful of melted butter. #### Doings of Boy Burglars.

The fact that a gang of boy burglars has been committing robberies in West Newton, Newtonville and Auburndale, has caused considerable comment, and suggests that parents need to look more closey after the doings of their boys. The bur-glaries have continued for more than a year, and have been confined so far as known to West Newton, Newtonville and Auburndale. The police had been on the track of several boys for some time, but not until Wednesday were their suspicions sufficiently well founded to warrant them in making arrests.

A week ago last Tuesday evening, C. H. Stacy's store in Robinson block, West Newton, was robbed of about $20 in money, some knives and other articles. The following evening, H. P. Dearborn's provision market was entered, and a few dollars taken. Last Wednesday night City Marshal Hammond received information which convinced him that a boy named Armitage knew something about the latter robberies. The marshal took him into custody, and on the way to the station he confessed and told the whole story. He said that he and a boy named Eddie Nichols entered Mr. Stacy's store by breaking a cellar window in the rear of the building. They went through the cellar and up into the store, where they found about $20, which they divided between them. The boys met with suel good success that they planned the next night to try H. P. Dearborn's store, and were assisted by two other boys, Wm. Fogwell and Alban Cummings. They visited the place about 7 o'clock in the evening, and effected an entrance through a rear window. The Fogwell boy had worked in the store and knew the lay of the premises. The money drawer was cleaned out and the money divided, each getting about $1.30. Young Armitage told where he had secreted some of the money in his father's shed, and the police went there and found a few dollars. The Nichols boy was found by the city marshal in bed, and taken to the station. He told substantially the same story as the other boy, and pointed out and the place in his room where he had secreted about $6 of his share of the plunder. The other two boys implicated in the robberty of Dearborn's store were also arrested late Wednesday night, and admitted breaking into the following places in October and November, 1885: The store of Oscar Lucas in West Newton, twice, about $15 in money being stolen; the provision market of F. M. Dutch, West Newton, only 15 cents taken; the grocery store of A. Whitney, West Newton, nothing taken; Church of the Messiah, Auburndale, 25 taken. All but the Nichols boy were connected with the latter jobs.

Complimenting the Firemen.

The following tribute to the excellence of the fire department deserves to be pub-ished:

Newton Upper Falls, Oct. 20, 1886.
To Henry L. Bixby, chief of fire department of the City of Newton:

THE RARTHOLDI STATUE.

BY JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

The land, that, from the rule of kings, In freeing us, itself made free, Our Old World sister, to us brings Her sculptured Dream of Liberty.

Unlike the shapes of Egypt's sands Uplifted by the toil-worn slave, On Freedom's soil with freemen's hands We rear the symbol free hands gave.

O France, the beautiful! to thee Once more a debt of love we owe; In peace beneath thy Fleur de lis, We hall a later Rochambeau!

Rise, stately Symbol! holding forth Thy light and hope to all who sit In chains and darkness! Belt the earth With watch-fires from thy torch uplit!

With water-ines from words a with water-ines from which Chaos heard and ceased to be, Trace on mid-air th' Isternal Will In signs of fire: "Let man be free!" Shine far, shine free, a guiding light To Reason's ways and Virtue's aim, A lightning flash the wretch to smile Who shields his license with thy name! ### HOW THE GIRLS WERE PROVIDED

[Bertha H. Ellsworth, in Woman's Journal.]

The Williams family consisted of father, mother, and four girls.

Mr. Williams was a successful merchant. He had often been congratulated, and, in-

He had often oeen congratulated, and, in-deed, had often congratulated himself, on his ability to provide for his girls.

If sons had been given him, he would have thought it necessary to give them some business training, with a view toward preparing them for the time when they must take up the responsibilities of life for themselves; but it never occurred to him themselves; but it never occurred to him that girls could have responsibilities or capacities beyond gracing a home.

Certainly the home Mr. Williams provided for his wife and daughters lacked nothing that could contribute to their comfort, and they knew very little of the processes by which their home was kept in order, and their meals nicely cooked and served. But, though so destitute of practical knowledge and training, the Williams girls were sensible, intelligent girls, with a large reserve force of common-sense and latent energy.

Anna was twenty, Lora eighteen, Mary fifteen, and Alla ten, when a sudden reverse of fortune swept away their means; taking even the beautiful home so long enjoyed that it seemed a necessity. Four hundred dollars, saved from the wreck, was all that remained to them, save a few honsehold goods and personal possessions. Mr. Williams decided to go "West" and start anew somewhere in the new country, or, perhaps, take up a "claim" on the vast prairies. In vain friends protested that he was too old and too heavily burdened with a dependent family to venture on such a step. He acknowledged the truth of these objections, but said, "I cannot stay here, where everything reminds me of prosperous days. I shall have my family to support anywhere, and I can surely raise enough there to supply us with food."

He could not afford to go and select a location and return for his family. It was decided that they should travel in emigrant style, and thus have an opportunity of examining the country as they passed through, and selecting their future home in some spot that pleased them.

The purchase of horses, wagon, and other articles necessary for the journey reduced their capital to an alarmingly small sum, and the women of this household began, for the first time, to realize the value of money and plan to economize it.

Many and long were the discussions in deciding, among the limited number of articles they could take with them, which would be likely to prove most useful in their Western home. Some of these selections proved very useful, and some of them, viewed in the light of their after experience, were laughably inappropriate.

At first the journey was a pleasant relief and diversion from their late trials and anxieties, and the younger girls in particular were jubilant over the new scenes and find the new sense of freedom that possessed them. But, as places where cooked food endle he procured became fewer and farther between, and they had to buy uncooked provisions which would serve as fuel? They ever gathered the green weeds and tied them in bunches to the wagon-cover to dry in the hot sun.

Occasionally heavy rains and winds so damaged the cover of their wagon that it became a very imperfect shelter. Often the food was spoiled, or its cooking rendered impossible, until the drenched, hungry, wretched travellers felt sure they could never again see an emigrant wagon without a feeling of interest in its inmates and pity and sympathy for their probable sufferings.

But all that had gone before seemed light in comparison to the blank horror and despair of finding, one morning, after camping on a vast prairie, a day's journey from any dwelling behind, and they knew not how many from any before, that Mr. Williams was delirious with fever! Anxiety for him, and the thought of their own seemingly helpless and hopeless condition, might have appalled stouter hearts than women are said to have. Mrs. Williams did indeed seem overcome; but the older girls, knowing that on them depended the care and safety of the whole party, arranged the sick man in as comfortable a position as possible in the wagon, kindled a fire (thankful that they had sufficient fuel on this particular morning), and prepared some gruel for their father, and hot offee and a substitute for bread, made of stift batter and baked in thick cakes in a frying-pan, for the other members of the family.

Mrs. Williams was with difficulty induced to drink some coffee and swallow a few mouthfuls of the cake, which taxed much better than those never reduced to such expedients may think possible. Hum ger was sufficient invitation to the girls to eat, and after the meal they felt refreshed, and, consequently, more hopeful, or at least, stronger to bear whatever was in store for them. The first task was to harness the horses which were grazing near by, tied by long ropes, to wooden pins driven into the ground, or, as the Western pecole called it, "bicketed."

The younger girls were of considerable service in pointing out where different parts of the harness belonged, curiosity having prompted them to observe its uses more closely than their sisters had done. The difficult task was at last accomplished; not, as they afterwards learned to know, exactly right, but with no serious mistakes. Taught by experience, they carefully stowed away the "picket ropes" and "pins" for future use. Anna and Lora, feeling thankful that they had, at least, the past experience of driving the ponies in the phaeton to help them in this crisis, took turns in driving.

"We must keep on the most travelled track," said Anna, "for that will soonest lead us to some house or settlement."

They travelled wearily on, stopping only at two places where they found water, to allow the horses to drink, and at noon to allow them to graze, and to get some dinner for the family. Then on and on, and still no sign of a house on the now broken and rolling prairie, which here seemed used for nothing but grazing-ground for great herds of cattle, of which they occasionally caught distant glimpses. The sick man moaned and tossed, and the tired girls listened with foreboding hearts, and kept anxious watch of a bank of heavy clouds which already obscured the sun and threatened a severe storm, they feared, before they could reach any shelter. At last, just as darkness gathered from the near approach of both night and storm, the welcome glimmer of a light greeted them from a small, rudely-built house, or rather hut.

In reply to their request that they might stop there and find shelter for a sick person, they were told to "Come right in, if ye can put up with centre by a long, rough log, the ends of the house.

"Well, purty much all over. Ye see, them boards is jest covered with dirt on the outside, an' packed down tight. It does for fair weather well 'nuff, which is the kind we mostly hev here, but it ain't fust-rate in soakin' rains, sech as this."

Her fears were abundantly verified. The "leaks" that soon made their appearance through the cracks between the roof-boards were of all sizes, from the small cataract to drops at intervals. The stove was drenched and the fire put out. The floor, which was of "dirt" as well as the roof, became a combination of puddles and sticky black mud. Three times they moved the sick man, endeavoring to protect him from the dripping water, but were at last forced to be content with only partially accomplishing this, even with the aid of his rubber overcoat.

Sleep was out of the question for any-body but Alla. She had found and nexted.

compilishing this, even with the aid of his rubber overcoat.

Sleep was out of the question for any-body but Alla. She had found and nestled into a small but comparatively dry space which was shared by a large, fierce dog, whose growling they had heard the woman quiet by a few sharp words as they drove up to the house. He showed no signs of feroeity now; on the contrary, the occasional approving wag of his tail and the highly-gratified blink of his watchful eyes showed that he considered it an honor to have the tangled curls and soft check of the little girl rest on his shaggy coat as she slept the deep, sweet sleep of tired childhood.

The woman looked at her with pitying admiration.

The woman looked at her with pitying admiration.

"I never did see Major take to anybody so. He's mostly cross to strangers. But no wonder he likes the little un. She's purty as a pictur'. Poor little critter! You've brought her to a hard country."

To this statement the heart-sick mother and daughters mentally uttered a fervent assent.

and daughters mentally uttered a fervent assent.

Their hostess' name proved to be Mrs. Manly. She informed them that there was a town four miles away. "Not a very big un; but big enough to git whiskey in," she added, with a gloomy look.

The rain ceased toward morning, and the day broke clear and bright. They were astir at the first glimmer of dawn. Most of the articles in the wayon were found to be more or less wet. The girls spread them out to dry, and Anna and Lora decided to drive to town, leaving the rest of the family where they were until they could see what was best to be done, and get medical aid for their father, if possible.

Mrs. Manly helped and instructed them in harnessing the horses, and directed them how to reach the town. The journey there

Manly came out and began quietly and rapidly to unhitch the horses and take off the harness, saying, meanwhile, in a tone of sorrowful disgust:

"My man's home, an' drunk! Ull see he don't hurt ye; an' ye mustu't mind what he says. When whiskey's in, wit's out."

"My man's home, an' drunk: I'll see he don't hart ye; an' ye mustn't mind what he says. When whiskey's in, wit's out."

And well did the human brute demonstrate this truth by the torrents of vulgarity and procanity which he poured into their shrinking ears at intervals through the night, and which they found more intolerable than the rain of the night before. He persisted in lying down in his mud-besmeared clothes and with his boots on, beside the sick man; swearing and uttering awful threats whenever the sufferer moved or muttered.

The doctor had sanctioned moving the invalid, and gladly they prepared, next morning, to do it.

While her husband lay in a drunken sleep, Mrs. Manley prepared as good a breakfast for her guests as her scanty larder afforded, and helped them pack up their effects, and place Mr. Williams as comfortably as possible in the wagon. Heartily did they each clasp her toil-hardened hand in parting, and register a vow in their hearts to return her kindness if opportunity ever afforded.

Mr. Williams seemed none the worse for the journey. Their few household goods were arranged as advantageously as possible in their limited quarters, and looked less meagre than they might have done had their house been larger.

"There's a good opening here for a washerwoman," said Anna, as she looked over the soiled garments belonging to the household.

"Well, I know of two washerwomen who are in search of employment and experience. They can imitate Charity by beginning at home," Lora answered.

And they did; devoting thereto an entire day of the hardest labor they had ever perience. They can imitate Charity by beginning at home," Lora answered.

And they did; devoting thereto an entire day of the hardest labor they had ever known, earning thereby aching backs and blistered hands, and also a happy consciousness of having accomplished a useful and necessary piece of work.

They found a real delight in making the house look as well as possible. With plain but clean white curtains at the windows, and on the floor some bright mats and strips of carpet, brought from their old home, together with a pretty spread for the pine table, and a dainty toilet stand, which the girls manufactured from an old muslin dress, a piece of cretonne, and a dry-goods box, the little house really began to assume a home-like look. In a trunk, that had not been penetrated by the rain, had been stored a few pictures and some pretty trifles that added still more to the cosy effect.

"Now, mamma," said the oldest daughter one day, seating the lady spoken to in the one easy chair they had brought with them, and herself and Lora on the long box, disguised by cretonne and stuffing as an oriental couch, "the doctor says that papa is a great deal better. You and Mary and Alla can manage alone now, and Lora and I are going out to work, to keep up the expenses of this establishment. We've each found something to do, for a while ast."

Mrs. Williams did not object; she knew their pressing needs, and was also learning giris; but she signed and said, "Poor chidren!"

"We're not poor. At least, we don't intend to remain so always," said the girls.

All through the summer Anna and Lora found work to do—hard, wearing work, over which they laughed with brave faces when they came home. And I hope no one will think them less brave, that the daily recurring blisters, aches, almost unbearable weariness, countless annoyances, and sometimes havsh criticisms and fault-finding, which followed the labor of their untrained hands, sometimes wrung tears from them in secret. But an honestly earned living for themselves and those dear to and dependent on them was their all-sufficient incentive and reward.

earned living for themselves and those dear to and dependent on them was their all-sufficient incentive and reward.

Mr. Williams's strength returned slowly, and, through endeavoring to work before he was able, he had a relapse which threat, ened to leave him a confirmed invalid. His recovery was also retarded by his intense anxiety about his family. He had so long regarded his girls as dependents that it was impossible for him to realize that they could actually support the family, and the fact that they were forced to work galled him inexpressibly.

Early in the autumn, Anna came home with a oright face, announcing that she was about to become a school-ma'am. She was engaged to teach for six months at twenty dollars per month. Many may think this sum small, but they do not know to how many toiling, struggling fellow-creatures, twenty dollars monthly would seem almost wealth, as it did at this time to the Williams family.

About a month after, Lora, who had for some time been doing housework for the wife of the principal merchant in the village, rushed into the Williams' house, exclaiming, "Congratulate me! I, too, am promoted."

She explained that on several "busy days" and on a number of occasions when the clerk had incapacitated himself for business by drinking too freely, she had "helped" in the store, and so efficiently that the proprietor had offered her the place, remarking that he "guessed" that she wouldn't be "eternally muddled with whiskey."

Her father's eyes were downcast, and there was no answering gladness in his face. She took his head between her hands, and kissing his clouded brow, said, coaxingly, "Aren't you glad, papa?

"It isn't a girl's place to go out into the world to work."

"Oh, please be nice and sensible. If a girl can do work that needs doing, and do it as well as a boy, why isn't the replace? I feel happier to work and be of use."

"Yes, that is what I feared. In this daily wear and tear of business you will so dull and blunt all the finer tastes and sensibilities of a real lady,

1—1—ca—cart nep it is to be shielded from dangers and trials and debasing influences. It is hard, hard that I can't do it?' he responded gloomily.

Lora kissed him silently, and lowering her veil, remarked that she must go back, and crossed the threshold with a much more sedate step than when she had entered. She took an indirect way, in order to gain time to dry the tears that would trickle under the friendly veil. She was conscious that she felt far less keenly the lack of the ease and elegance of her old life, than the lack of encouragement and appreciation in her new work. She wondered (but with a little incredulous tightening of the lips) if this was another sign that she was growing unrefined and unladylike.

There was a rush of lurrying feet behind her, an arm encircled her waist, and Mary's voice said, "Mother and I are glad, dear, and so will Anna be. I want to tell you a plan of mine."

After hearing the plan, Lora said: "I think you will be more apt to find sale for such things in this place than in most Western towns. Most of the people living here own great herds of cattle. They seem always to have money. I've noticed they buy everything they fancy. I'll take charge of the things for you."

Mary went home and collected from trunks and boxes a varied assortment of ribbons, laces, bright pieces of silk, satin, and velvet that had accumulated in prosperous days, and unpacked her water-color paints and brushes, and a portfolio of sketches which, in beauty and finish, had justified her drawing-teacher in declaring that Mary was a "born artist."

The result was that, two weeks before Christmas, a certain store window blossomed out with a bewilderingly pretty display of "hand-painted" toilet appurtenances, fancy articles, exquisitely-dressed dolls, and lovely water color sketches.

Christmas morning saw an unbroken family circle round the Williams breakfast table. The father was able to join them for the first time in many weeks. Bright were the faces and gay the greetings, and the simple gifts bought by "the girls" were more enjoyed than costiler ones bought for them of old. Among those Mary received was a pretty portemonnaie.

"The portemonnaie please accept from me," said Lora, "but the contents are your own earnings, I sold the last of your work yesterday. At least a dozen have asked me if you will give drawing lessons. I'm sure you can get up a class.

FURNISHING THE PARLOR.

"BESSIE AND I" DID FOR SEVEN-TEEN AND A HALF CENTS.
[From Puck.]

We had wanted so much' to furnish the parlor this fall, Bessie and I, But when poor, over-worked papa, who superintended two Sunday-schools and drudged in a bank—when dear papa went to Canada, we knew that it was not to be thought of.

But Bessie, who took Blessed Hours, with its charming "Home Department"— our dear, sunny-faced Bessie was not a bit our dear, sunny-raced bessie was not a out discouraged.

"Do you see that?" she said, drawing me to the front window one day, and pointing with an air of delightful mystery to the ash-barrel.

"But what"—I began, in bewilderment.

"Wait and see!" said Bessie, sparkling-

When I came into the parlor next morning, I stood transfixed, and gazed costati-ing, I stood transfixed, and gazed cestatically.

The ash-barrel stood in the middle of the room. Had it not been for the aroma of decayed vegetables, with which it filled the air, I should hardly have recognized it. A piece of brightly figured cretonne covered its top, and green paper-cambric descending to the floor, with a charming finish of brown paper, gayly ruffled and pinked on the edge, completed the most striking and picturesque center-table in the world.

Bessie stood near, enjoying my astonishment and admiration.

"What will we do with the ashes?" I said, wonderingly.

Leave them in the range," said Bessie, brightly,

Leave them in the range," said Bessie, brightly.

After that, the work of furnishing the parlor went on joyously. With Blessed Hours always before us, and with our own busy brains and deft fingers, it was a sweetly absorbing pastime.

An old cheese-cloth polonaise of Bessie's did nicely for curtains. The places where the tucks had been let down were conspicuous, to be sure; but one hardly thought of that—the effect of papa's old red suspenders, which looped them back, was so daintily pretty.

Dear Bessie planned another surprise for me.

me.

"Look?" she said, covering my eyes and leading me to a corner of the parlor.

"It was occupied by our next neighbor's chicken-coop standing on three empty stools, the whole neatly stained with poke-"A what-not!" I cried, in rapture.
"I brought it in after dark," said Bessie,

"A what-not!" I cried, in rapture.

"I brought it in after dark," said Bessie, gayly.

A cosily tempting easy-chair was made from two soap boxes, piled up and stuck together with bandoline, and covered with a blithe piece of calico. A scalloped paper which had come on top of a cake made a lovely tidy.

Dear old Aunt Nabby stopped in on her way to a precious home meeting just as we finished it.

"What girls they are!", she said, her peaceful old face lighting up as our parlor burst upon her.

"Try our easy chair, Aunt Nabby,"said Bessie, pressing her iuto it.

I suppose it was because the bandoline was not thick enough that the upper soap-box came off just then.

"Don't let this discourage you, dears," said Aunt Nabby, with a 'gentle gayety, as we helped her from the room.

A pretty and capacious catch-all was made from one of Bessie's overshoes, tastefully varnised, and fastened to the wal with a tack which we first carefully polished. When it was not in use as a catchall, she wore it as usual. This, together with a cherry bent-pin receiver, an old tomato-can hung up with a delicious bit of pink twine, brightened our walls, once so bare, and gave the finishing touch to our dear, cosey, delightfully homesome little parlor.

"And all for seventeen cents and a half!" we said, sobbing on each other's necks with half-incredulous joy.

About Flax.

From a very interesting book on crochet work published by Messrs J. R. Leeson & Co. of Boston we take the following admir-able introductory chapter written by Mr. Leeson.

Co. of Boston we take the following admirable introductory chapter written by Mr. Leeson.

Amongst vegetable fibers adapted to the use of mankind in the fabrication of garments or coverings, and for ornamentation, flax occupies a conspicuous place, both in respect of extended application, and the antiquity of its use. The Phoenicians and the Egyptians were proficient in flax culture, as well as in linen manufacture; with them "purple and fine linen" were synonymous with refinement and wealth.

The skilful manipulation of the flax fibre was well understood and practised by the children of Israel. In Tyre and Sidon, as Isaah tells us, "they work in fine wax, and weave net works." In all subsequent ages as history shows, flax has been grown, spun and woven; it has been worn by priests, sages and warriors for attire or adornment on occasions of homor or display. The maids of Athens, the fair dames of Roundinavia, the beauties of France, have all been familiar with distaff and spindle; and through the long vista of the past have tuned their ditties to the merry whirl of the spinning-wheel. Show one of these homely implements to any New Englander past middle age, and a flood of eloquence will be unloosed. You will soon learn homely implements to any New Englander past middle age, and a flood of eloquence will be unloosed. You will soon learn about the sister or mother whose ready fingers deftly sput the smoothest yarn, from home-grown flax on the old farm, in the far off days when thrift ruled the household; wild strawberries tasted like strawberries then, and the speckled trout if anything, rather wanted to be caught by the boys so it seemed.

berries then, and the species then, rather wanted to be caught by the boys so it seemed.

Our farmers no longer grow their flax for home consumption, and the maidens have lost the art of spinning yarn; and yet flax holds its own in our homes; with netting, knitting, crocket and outline work as vehicles for the display of its adaptability, it advances to still more artistic forms of service; and it requires not the eye of a prophet to foresee the continuous thread of its use extending through ages yet to come, in even more beautiful forms than any attained in the past.

"And the whilling of a wheel, Dull and drowsy makes me feel; Glean the long threads in the sup, While within this brain of mine observed, brighter and more me. By the busy wheel are spun."

Skin diseases cannot be successfully treated by external applications. The proper way to cure such complaints is to purify the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Under the vitalizing influences of this medicine all the functions of the body are brought into healthy action.

It is a spicy October afternoon, and our car, full to overflowing, leaving the B. and L. station, is boarded by a smiling conduc tor, who briskly remarks, "Tickets!"
"No tickets!" "Money?" "No money!
tramps!" says the doctor, and adds with a wave of his hand toward the professor, who is dispensing tickets in the distance, "Opened wrong end of the barrel."

Our first halt is made at College Hill, to visit the Goddard Chapel, and the museum where the benevolent face of Barnum keeps watch over the baby elephant (Jumbo has not yet arrived), and we find the collection of "strange beasts" very interesting. There is a wide view from the roof of the library, its chief attractiveness being due to the many ponds and streams which divide the plain. The horizon is not at once impressive, but our guide speedily disentangles the lines which distance draws so monotonously, and the geography becomes fascinating. The Blue Hill range is nearly hidden by Parker Hill, with the exception of Big Blue, which has a way of just escaping most obstructions, and making its attendant peaks unmistakable. Further to the right the pale blue summit of Pegan, in Dover, is visible; Prospect, in Waltham, shows its top over the Belmont ridge, and that tiny dimple against the sky is the "coll" of Doublet, in Weston. Further to the north is Turkey Hill in Winclester, Horn Pond Mountain, our present destination, and the oak covered heights of Middlesex Fells.

Taking cars again, we disembark at Winchester, and striking the margin of Wedge-mere, follow its windings under rustling oaks, getting glimpses of rich coloring, red and brown, upon the companion shore and in the water below. A section of new highway makes the wood and ponds beyond still more inviting. Horn pond mountain, in the edge of Woburn, rises rather abruptly from the pond, making a short steep climb, and is crowned by a reservoir, from whose wall we readily trace the way we have come. It is from the ledges a little to the west of this that we are greeted by our friends, misty and blue, Wachusett and the Monadnocks, and other peaks of southern New Hampshire. We plock a belated clover as we hurry back down the steep incline, and retrace our steps in the growing dusk, by field and pond margin, and if the conductor was bewildered by the advent of seventy unexpected passengers, it would have taken a much greater misfortune than the loss of a s

A gentleman at a recent matinee at a theatre was seated behind a lady wearing one of the fashionable tall hats. "Excuse me, madam, but if you do not remove your hat I shall not be able to see anything," The lady ignored him. "Excuse me, madam, but if you do not remove your hat something unpleasant will happen." The lady ignored him again. The gentleman put on his own hat. Loud cries of "Take off that hat!" "Take off that hat!" arose from the audience behind. The lady thought the cries referred to her hat, and quickly removed it. "Thank you, madam."—[Ex. quickly removed it. am."-[Ex.

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of sense of General Wearmess and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Tailing Health.

Ten years areo my health began to fail.

I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and atrong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Aver's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

hearers the practical value of her subject. Let Newton ladies be present if possible.

—Quinces, quinces saluted us with their fragrance as we peeped into the store-house of Mr. G. E. Wales on Cedar street. In the working room, the quinces in skillful hands were seen neatly prepared for cooking. There, too, were to be seen large platters of seckel pears, steaming hot from the kettles, being, by the master's own hands, deftly packed in glass jars. The cover of this, the Wales jar, is of his own invention, and has been used by him for fifteen years with the best of success; it is made of an acid proof metallic composition, Japanued. The rubber band used is of pure gum. Mr. Wales is also the inventor of the oval jelly tumbler, now so much in use. He has made the care and preserving of fruit a fine art, and it will become every house-keeper who wishes to avoid the risk and toil of such work, to apply to Mr. Wales. Here you may select from over fifty different styles, any of the native or foreign fruits, pine-apples grated or sliced, also sliced oranges put up in glass or stone jars. The canned tomatoes are very superior, as they are put up early in the season fresh from the vines, not being left to ripen in boxes till the flavor is gone; they are cooked in the jar, which preserves the flavor. Mr. Wales has also the best of cider vinegar; his wares go far and-near, and their reputation makes this one of the most creditable of Newton industries. Purity in materials, perfect condition in fruit, scrupulous care in their preparation, are his watch words; he uses no glue stock to stiffen his jellies, no apple pulp to adulterate them, no dye stuffs for coloring matter, no chemicals to keep them from fermentation, no bleaching process to make the fruit look well. Nothing more elegant, or delicate to the eye, or agreeable to the palate, in this line, is manufactured in all the round world.

Village Temperance Meeting.

The First Church was well filled on Sunday evening in spite of the rain. Mr. Dwight Chester presided. Col. I. F. Kingsbury led the congregation in singing. Mr. Chester, in his address, said that Newton's first anti-liquor measure was in 1648, when the apostle Eliot petitioned the General Court for prohibition, for the sake of the Nonantum Indians. Sixty years ago, Samuel Hyde, Joseph Conant, Seth Davis and others met at the Centre school house and formed "The Friendly Society." Thus from its founding, Newton has been a "mo-license" community. But does our city declare for prohibition as strongly as it ought? From one to two thousand of our voters neglect when at the polls to register their vote on this subject. Five weeks from Tuesday this subject will come up again at our city election, and let us give such a rousing voice for "No License" that it shall encourage many towns and cities that are struggling hard with this question, and be heard among the Berkshire hills. Rev. W. I. Haven spoke on Prohibition desirable as constitutional. "It is," he said, "the question of making the liquor traffic an outlaw everywhere in this Commonwealth, at the Parker House, the Point of Pines, the St. Botolph's Club and Sullivan's saloon. He read a strong paragraph from the Atlantic Monthly, warning the people against letting the political power drift into the liquor saloons. Let us have the prohibition of the sale and manufacture of intoxicating drinks a law, and have the state provide for its enforcement. Shall not this Commonwealth cast out that which is injuring its life in the person of its weaker members. High license is not consistent with democratic institutions; if the gilded saloon may live to drug the high born, then must the groggery be suffered. Rev. Dr. Hovey followed, speaking of the wastefulness of liquor drinking, and gave the alarming statement that nine hundred millions for deducation and religion. The closing address was by Rev. T. J. —Harvest Sunday brought surprises to the congregation that met in the Baptist church, Oct. 31. How could it be otherwise, when in spite of the storm, which had continued from the previous Tuesday to the very hour of service, such a generous and tastefully arranged display of autumn leaves, flowers, fruits and vegetables greeted them? The large congregation, exceeding the usual attendance in fair weather, was also a glad surprise. So was the sight of the long vacant singing seats, occupied by a quartette of young people, who sang an opening anthem and led the singing of the morning. At the close of the Harvest sermon of the morning and the Bible reading of the evening, a last surprise came to the acting pastor, Rev. Mr. Safford, in the kind profier of the flowers and fruits and vegetables, so suggestive of the Divine Giver of all good things.

To the Hon. Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Newton.

In addition to the 211 names previously sent you asking you to grant the petition for the location of the Newton Street Railway, I herewith hand you another petition, from parties who did not have an opportunity to sign the other. I also enclose an unsolicited letter from Mr. A. D. S. Bell, which he sent me to be forwarded to you with this petition. I have no question but what this letter voices the best sentiment of our city. I trust you will grant that portion of the location asked for running from Newtonville to Newton and West Newton—which will give a direct connection with Mt. Auburn, City Hall and Waltham. This, with the great accommodation to our High School pupils and those wishing to visit the Cemetery, will meet a long felt want.

Very respectfully yours.

Newton Centre, Nov. 1, '86.

C. S. DAVIS, Esq.:

Dear Sir.—I am very much interested in the projected horse railroad, and 'am surprised that any one in our city should oppose it. I am quite sure that no one in my part of the city drives through the streets contemplated for the track more than I do, being obligen to send my children to the public schools every day. While I prefer streets free, I feel that I have no right to oppose anything that will be for the public good.

oppose anything that will be for the public good.

I sincerely hope that you may succeed in having the road built to accommodate not only the rich people of our city, but the children who attend the High School, the servants of our families who are interested in their churches, many who wish to visit our beautiful Cemetery, and the large number of poor people who wish to go from one part of the city to another at a small expense. I am positive that five years after the road has been established, a large number of those who oppose it now would object to having it removed.

Yours very truly,

A. D. S. Bell.

—The lecture by Judge Devens before the Channing Literary Union, Thursday evening, attracted a large audience and was well worth hearing. Judge Devens is one of the most interesting speakers of the day, and the lecture, "The Civil War," is full of interest. The next lecture in the course comes on Dec. 23rd.

—Messrs. Brazer & Prade of 24 Hayward place, Boston, have just finished decorating Engelhard's new cafe, which is called the most magnificent cafe in America. The New England Illustrated Magazine, in describing the establishment, says that Brazer & Prade have succeeded in giving to the public the finest exhibition of interior decoration to be found in Boston, as the firm are thorough artists. Mr. Brazer, the senior member of the firm, is a well known resident of Newton.

—The ladies of the Baptist church gave a sociable in the church parlors Thursday evening. Refreshments were served from 8 to 8.39, and at 9 o'clock there was a brief but very pleasant entertainment, consisting of a piano duet by Miss Edith Holman and Rev. Mr. Gow, a fine bass solo by Mr. Chas. Farley, and a short but very bright talk on Kansas by Rev. Mr. Johnson, the missionary to the Swedes, who spoke at the church Sunday evening.

—It is very seldom that so large a congregation is seen at the Methodist church as gathered there last Sunday evening to listen to the very able and eloquent sermon of Rev. Mr. Nichols on "Temperance." Though the subject is an old and familiar one, Mr. Nichols made it extremely interesting, and his forcible manner of presenting the subject made a lasting impression on his hearers. Such sermons ought to be more frequently given and more generally heard in our community. The subject of next Sunday evening will be, "Poverty or Riches, which?"

Riches, which?"

At the annual meeting of the Newton Young Men's Christian Association, the following officers were elected: President, R. F. Cumming; Vice-president, C. A. Haskell; Secretary, Geo. M. Weed; Treasurer, Chas. F. Bacon; Directors, H. J. Wood, G. D. Gilman, H. P. Kenway, Hiram Leonard, Geo. C. Travis. The association closes up a successful year, and with new and younger men for its officers will no doubt enter on the work with greater zeal and with still greater success. We shall publish a program of the anniversary exercises, which occurs Sunday, Nov. 28th, next week.

The Indian Missions.

The meeting in behalf of the Indians, in union with the Newton Indian Association, at Eliot church, Wednesday evening, was largely attended in spite of the weather, people being present from all portions of the city. Mr. J. W. Davis, president of the Newton Indian Association, presided, and the prayer, affould opened the meeting with prayer, affould opened the meeting and prefaced his introduction of the speakers of their order of the Aposte Eliot among the Indians, in this vicinity some 240 years ago. His first converts were among the Waban tribe, and he instituted churches and schools, and many of the Indians were converted. The question has been often asked why the work of Eliot brought forth no lasting fruit. He establidates and the property of the Indians from point to point and down the Indians from point to point and down the Indians from point to point was safe, and the Indians from point to point was safe, and the Indians school at Natick had to be transferred to Deer Island to preserve the lives of the pupils. The Indians were driven out of New England and widely scattered, and it was impossible to gather the churches together again. The case of the Delawares was a sample of the whole; driven from the Delaware to the Susquehana, thence into Ohio, and thence still further west, until in despair the little remannt of the tribe took refuge in Canada, to escape the churches together again. The case of the Delawares was a sample of the whole; driven from the Delaware to the Susquehana, thence into Ohio, and thence still further west, until in despair the little remannt of the tribe took refuge in Canada, to escape the churches to the control of the Indians driven off. Under such circumstances it can not be expected that the Indians which were driven from the Churchis and interest to the clucational side, we must be assessed to the side of the Indian young people's missionary societies, and women's societies, and we contribute all we are able to send the gospel among other Indians. We rejoice that you are interested in the same good work. The speaker's earnestness and supplicity made a deep impression upon the audience, as he illustrated what Christianity can do for his race.

The quintet then sang, after which Rev. Mr. Riggs spoke of the necessity of Christianizing as well as of civilizing the Indians, and the great work before the missionaries in training up the Indian youth to become good citizens and Christians.

He was followed by Rev. Mr. Shelton, who stated that the church at Santee has 200 members and was self-supporting; but the field was a great one, and there was urgent need of funds to carry the gospel to other tribes, and he made an urgent appeal for assistance in this most worthy cause.

After singing, a collection was taken up, which realized nearly one hundred dollars. After benediction, many of the audience availed themselves of the invitation to come forward and greet the Indians and missionaries, and examine photographic views of their schools and churches.

City Government.

The Common Council met Monday evening, with President French in the chair. Other members present were Councilman Dix, Fiske, Redpath, Chadwick, Johnson, Hollis, Coffin, Kennedy, Edmands, Ross, Billings and Atherton.

In the absence of Clerk Glover, City Engineer Noyes was elected clerk pro tem, and the reading of the records was diseased with Business from the board of aldermen was disposed in concurrence, and as no one appeared at the hearings on the laying out and accepting of Morse and Emerson streets, the hearings were closed, and orders were passed for there accept-

A petition was received from Alvah Hovey for the laying out of Irving street, northerly from Marshall street, 40 feet wide, and referred to the Highway Committee.

A petition from Bertrand E. Taylor and others to have the corners of Grant avenue and Beacon street rounded off, graded and accepted, so that the exit from Grant avenue might be more convenient for teams, was referred to the same committee.

Henry Breck and others asked to have Faxor street, Ward 1, from Watertown to Crescent streets, laid out 40 feet wide, and accepted by the city as a public street. The same petitioners asked to have Crescent street, from Faxon to Cali-fornia street, laid out and accepted; both referred to the Highway Committee.

Councilman Redpath presented a petition for two street lamps on the north east corners of Hawthorne street, Ward 2; referred to the lamp company.

Councilman Kennedy moved for a reconsideration of the vote on the appropriation of $3,000 for a drain on Boyd street, which was passed with one dissenting vote. Mr. Kennedy said that he and dissenting vote. Mr. Kennedy said that he and others of the Highway Committee had looked into the matter, and thought that in the uncertainty about the sewerage question, a drain should be laid for less than $5,000 and one could be put down that would answer the purpose for $800. He therefore moved that the $3,000 be stricken out from the order and $800 substitute. from the order, and $800 substituted.

Councilman Dix asked what it was proposed to Councilman Kennedy said it was proposed to lay a 10 inch pipe instead of an 18 inch one, which would carry off the surface water. The 18 inch pipe was to drain all the vicinity, but the 10 inch ould only drain Boyd street, near Jewett street would only drain Boyd street, near Jewett street, and Emerson place. There was where the chief trouble existed. Messrs. Esterbrook and Eaton, two of the sufferers by the surface water, were present, and would give an account of their sufferings if the council wished. The residents there ought certainly to be released, and the city was under a moral and legal obligation to relieve them. The sum was made $800 instead of the $750 spoken of, as the size of the pipe was changed from 8 to 10 inches, and it would take about 700 feet of pipe. feet of pipe.

Councilman Edmands said that the city had saved $2,200 by waiting two weeks, and if we waited another fortnight, the city would save the

Mr. Kennedy replied that the money was not saved, and the $800 would not answer the purpose of the $3,000 drain, as it would not carry off the same amount of water or drain the same amount of territory.

After another objection by Councilman Edmands the amendment was passed, and the question then came on the passage of the amended order.

Councilmen Redpath said that he would be glad to see the people relieved, but it was late in the season to do the work, and the people would only have to wait a few months more to have the work have to wait a few months more to make the order, done next year.

Councilman Dix said he should oppose the order, on account of the latences of the season, and the extra expense it would involve if the ground should freeze up before the drain was dug, as seemed probable.

A vote was then taken on the passage of the order, and it failed to pass, President French, and Councilmen Dix, Edmands, and Redpath voting Councilmen Dix, Edmands, and Redpath voting no.

Councilman Kennedy endeavored to change his vote before the result was announced, so as to move a reconsideration, but President French was too quick for him.

The $600 order for the Charles street drain then came up, Councilman Atherton moving its reconsideration. He said that the condition of the Boat Club's grounds was most peculiar, as hills sloped to Mards them from two directions, and the water from the street used to flow down and over the grounds into the river. The Boat Club had spent, or were to spend some $10,000 on their house and grounds, which would be so much added to Riverside and to the city, and the city would get its money back in a few years.

Councilman Edmands objected, and in reply to Councilman Edmands objected, and in reply to Councilman Redpath's suggestion that the Club might not give the right of way next season, said that they would not be so foolsh as to bite their own noses off in that way.

Councilman Redpath said that he had had a number of interviews with members of the club, and they were not willing now to let the drain go through their grounds, but would allow it to go around them.

Councilman Atherton said it would not be the and they were not strictly and they were not strictly also around them.

Councilman Athertos said it would not be the club that would suffer if the drain was not built, but the abuttors on the street below the boat house, as the water would now flow over their estates.

A vote was then taken, and as President French, Councilmen Dix, Edmands, Fiske, and Redpath woted no, the order failed to pass.

Councilman Atherton asked for a reconsideration of the report of the highway committee on the Lower Falls bridge matter, as he did not notice it when it came up earlier in the evening, and he wished to explain it. The Conneil rather discourteously refused to grant his request, but afterwards though better of it, and reconsidered the matter.

Councilman Atherton said that the Highway Committee stated that they understood that the Councilman Atherton said that the Highway Committee stated that they understood that the people of Lower Fails would subscribe and pay the balance of the cost of the Foot Bridge, but he had told the committee destinetly at the time, that the citizens of Lower Fails were not able to pay anything, and that the had not thought of such at hinz. The bridge was of benefit to the city, as they in the bridge was of benefit to the city, as the time of the councilman of th

Councilman Kennedy said further reference to the committee was useless. The bridge connected private property, and was of chief benefit to the factories there, and the manufacturers should be willing to pay the balance.

Councilman Atherton said that the corporations owning the factories were chiefly foreign ones, and the officers and stockholders lived out of town; they would not contribute, and the people of the Palis were mostly working people, and were not able to contribute. The city had kept the old bridge in order, and Dr. Crehore admitted that there was a right of way over his land to the bridge.

refusing to vote for any further consideration of it.

A polition was received, stating that leach street in Newtonville was too narrow in places to accommodate the public, and asking that it be laid out and widened. Referred to the Highway Committee.

No one appeared at the hearing on the laving ut of Allston street, and the Council adjourned.

THOU SHALT NOT STEAL

Doubtless many of our readers, indeed a large proportion of them, are familiar with this quotation, and know where to place it No special mode of stealing is indicated, and the diverse methods are not graded by a scale of 600 or more, The prohibition is stern, absolute, and generic. It covers and includes the sneak thief

It covers and includes the sneak thief who snatches your handkerchief, and the sneakier thief of half a million dollars, more or less. They are all of one lot, with but one label, in the decalogue.

That brace of treasurers in Boston, he of Portland, the last one in Hartford, and the newest grief just out, "that of an hour's age, does hiss the speaker." Before this ink is dry, who comes next? As we open our evening paper, we expect to see "painful shock," "great business man," "practical financier," "ostentatious benevolence," "millionaire with a basis of 5000 dollars," and so on.

and so on.

Let those who have clean hands, or think they have, approach the subject and attempt to analyze. Where does all this be-

We can comprehend how a man may yield to social pressure, and retain for private use some small fraction of the sums committed to his trust, intending of course in "all the magnanimity of thought," to replace the same with lawful interest, at the very earliest moment,—how that thin entering wedge may be driven deeper and deeper till the fissure is wide and ghastly,—how still bnoyed up by hope of some fortunate speculation, that shall cover all his shorts, he may tide over the present emergency by false entries,—relying upon continued health and unblemished reputation and impregnable social position, to bluff off all searching scrutiny of his accounts.

Heaven only knows how many such there are at this present moment, respectable and respected thieves, not yet found out. Ah! not yet! Perhaps some one now reading these lines may see himself reflected in them. When the National Association of Bank men met at Boston this summer, the fettiring president referred to the anxiety of the members of that body to detect and prevent breaches of trust. At that moment a vice-president of the association must have blushed to think that he was a criminal in the eye of every man present. The association should have for its motto, "I'll till."

"The beginning of iniquity is as when one letteth out water"—and at this point the erratic course is intelligible. Some are dyed-in-the-wool sinners; others sin once, and never again.

But how is it that such a man, as one we personally know to have been, could deliberately do these things? Twenty, thirty, fifty, and even a hundred thousand dollars short in his accounts for a series of years, meeting his financial associates day by day, in all the abandon of personal friendship, dining with them, yachting, giving parties, and even responding with them at church: "From all these things, good Lord, deliverus." It passes comprehension!

A man may bear up lightly under false imputations, sustained by his inner self-consciousness of rectitude. Many have thus lived heroic lives. But to know tha mon on the Mount, the veil must have been on their hearts.

To have and to hold what belongs to another, without his consent, is about as near stealing as we can paraphrase or define it.

Let us read and translate the archaic terms into modern phraseology, so as to arrest the practical ear with their true meaning.

"If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee," (or several oughts with a numeral at the end of them,) "leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way—first be reconciled to thy brother"—(i. e. get a receipt in full of all just demands to date)—"and then come and offer thy gift."

thy gift."
This is New Testament doctrine, dogmas

This is New Testament doctrine, dogmas fo the contrary notwithstanding. Religion takes people just as it finds them, with all their natural and inborn proclivities. Some people are honest in the grain; others, it must be confessed, are otherwise.

Every farmer knows the difference in his apples gathered from the same tree; and if he knew the reason why some rot in the barrel, and others keep till spring, he would make a note of it. That some bank bills are counterfeit is no discredit to the banking system.

would make a note of it. That some bank bills are counterfeit is no discredit to the banking system.

Even in the sacred circle that surrounded the Master, there was an eight per cent. of villainy. The keenest wounds to religion have been given in the house of friends, from the kiss of Judas down to the last Sunday school superintendent whose sermon to young men on moral rectitude was delivered on the very eve of infamy.

What shall we say to these things? Heredity?—but this can bardly explain the delinquency of degenerace sons of noble sires and grandsires. Perhaps the infusion of some perverse element from the female side of the house may disturb the succession of traits. Here is one, the flower of Essex and Suffolk, who inherited a prestige which cost two life-times to establish, and cost the inheritor nothing but to assume it, just merely to wear his ancestor's name gracefully.

Recognizing in some degree the enormity of such apostacy, we fail to comprehend the causes adequate,—the diagnosis of the disease. We know there are unfortunates born of crime, and in crime, nursed and cradled in it, never experiencing any other condition or environment but profanity, drunkenness, debauchery and outlawry, a spectacle fearful to contemplate, hopeless and hideous.

But here we have a deeper moral problem,—a selected ancestry of the purest blood, without taint, reared in the church and in the halls of the highest learning, and buttressed around by every conceivable social restraint,—how could such a one go astray?

Physicians say some cells of the brain open to the stimulus of alcohol and opium, preducing the phenomena of desire. Once open, they are never again closed, and the brain becomes henceforth the abode of a resident demon, who waits and watches, and finally masters the man. or tries to. Hence the cautionary signals, "touch not, taste not, handle not." It is quite certain we never crave what we have never tasted. Thus acquisitiveness may be stimulated in the brain to abnormal dimensions, so as to overpower the moral sentiments. The boy who robs a neighbor's orchard grows up, and finally robs a bank or firm.

The river has its beginnings in the little springs. Causes and effects seem wide apart, but they are linked together in the same series.

Kleptomania, or the desire to appropriate the belongings of others to your own springs. Causes and effects seem wide apart, but they are linked together in the same series.

Kleptomania, or the desire to appropriate the beiongings of others to your own use, is partly an inherited trait, and partly the result of careless home training. Some tribes of savages are very strict in the matter of "mine and thine." Others will steal whatever they can lay hands upon. Mahomedans are reputed to be very scrupulous in this respect.

It has been said that "every man has his price"—(one of those nimble phrases that trip up the judgment.) It is an insult to human nature, besides being historically false. Moral cowardice may explain some lapses otherwise unaccountable. "I'd rather die than be poor," said a female whose husband's failure in business was imminent. No other idea seemed to have entered her mind.

Shortness of vision is another potent cause closely allied to moral cowardice. Children are entirely absorbed by the foreground of the present passing moments. Some minds never outgrow the veal period, or if they ever take to-morrow into their thoughts at all, take the risk of it, spend as they go, and have a good time as they call it, out of everybody's money that comes to hand.

These are the must-haves, male and female, one of the most numerous and dan-as they go, and have a good time as they call it, out of everybody's money that comes to hand.

These are the must-haves, male and female, one of the most numerous and dangerous classes in society, and never to be trusted with money. Whom then shall we trust? The two gossips had it, in a well-known scandal case some years since, "Well, there," said one, "I think—and then again, I don't know. But after all, I am about the same opinion I was at first,—and then I was undecided."

The main point of practical interest is how to prevent these stealings. We put our treasures into steel vaults for safety from outsiders;—how shall we be safe from the steal of the treasurer inside?

Where there is a possibility of embezzlement there is a probability; and this should be made impossible by a proper system of auditing. It is mere nonsense to talk about complex entries that cannot be ferreted out. Of course any treasurer smart enough to steal, can baffle and bluff a board of directors. But try a ferret once, or keep one for occasional auditing, at times not expected. An expert will follow a needly through a haystack and find it.

If a treasurer is honest keep him so, by making it impossible to be otherwise. It is safe and courteous to bolster up good intentions. Character is not a tangible security, else why are bonds required? Hang the sword of Damocles over the treasurer's head by as single hair, fastened permanently into the ceiling over his desk.

Vouchers should be opened and checked off one by one, not assumed from outside packages or wrappers. No matter if he is the prophet Daniel himself, who by the way was a royal treasurer in his day, and kept his situation through successive administrations.

The well known instance of Thomas among the twelve disciples illustrates the kept his situation through successive administrations.

The well known instance of Thomas among the twelve disciples illustrates the point. He properly refused to assent without proof, and the Divine Master submitted to his scrutiny and accorded to him the vouchers that his conscientious scruples demanded. Some "doubting Thomas" would be just the man for an auditing committee.

In all business transactions whatever, it is a safe rule to prepare beforehand for the "unexpected."

Announcement of Ben Perley Poor's Forthcoming Book.

Forthcoming Book.

Sixty years of a busy journalist's life at Washington are epitomized in Maj. Ben Perley Poor's forthcoming book. One of the admirers of the Major recently said that "at a judiciously ripe period of life the Major stopped growing old, and since then, like some of the choice Maderia of which he writes with so much feeling, he has only been accumulating boquet and flavor." Maj. Poor has been one of the best known and one of the most knowing men in Washington society for a half a century. His is the sunny temperament delighting in bright, social intercourse. Yet his connection with daily journalism and his position in the U. S. Senate placed him always in the thick of political affairs and social gossip. He was ever in the Washington "Swim," breasting the waves with jovial vigor, and never failing to hear or see what was said and done.

The Major could never be very solemn, jovial vigor, and never faming to near or see what was said and done.

The Major could never be very solemn, and in his ripened sketches of Washington life every phase reminds him of half a dozen amusing anecdotes. He has a rare gift in telling a story, and his anecdotes are inexhaustible.

His book will not only add lustre to his fame as a writer, but is of so unique a character and so intensely interesting in matter that it will prove a valuable contribution to the literature of the country. It has mirth for the mirthful; wit for the witty, information for all, and we doubt if it has been equalled by any subscription book since the war.

It is being issued by the well-known house of Hubbard Bros., Boston, Mass., and sold exclusively by subscription.

I don't care to hear anything about your playactors. They are an immoral set, the whole of them, and I am sorry that a son of mine should have anything to do with them. What do you suppose your dear father would say, were he alive, to know that his son was spending his time consorting with such people, instead of attending to his duties? What's that you say? President of the United States? So much the worse for him. A pretty example he is setting for the yeung people of America! #### A CITIZEN'S TICKET.

One of the most absurd things connected with municipal politics is, that national politics should be carried into the contest for city officers. Why a man should make any more honest or prudent a mayor, for instance, because he happens to be a Re-publican, than he would be if he were a Democrat or a Mugwump, is one of those puzzles which "no feller can find out." We are glad to say that in Newton, national politics has entered very little into city elections, and that the people have voted for the best man, without much regard to their politics.

Men of all parties are equally interested in the prosperity of the city, and have an equal duty to perform. It is the best men, the men who would look most carefully after the city's interests, that are wanted, and such men are not confined to any party, in Newton especially.

What the citizens should do in the campaign now opening, is to unite in a general caucus or convention, look carefully over the field, and nominate the best man available. Then if any were dissatisfied, they could hold another caucus, and agree upon an opposition candidate, if they could. That would be the most sensible way of getting candidates, and for that reason the Citizen's Movement ought to receive the endorsement of all good citizens. So far as we have been able to discover, it embraces men of all parties, and men who are heartily interested in Newton. The maminations that it makes will deserve especial consideration from all who desire o have Newton a well governed city.

If the principles embodied in the civil service reform system were to be applied to municipal officials, there would be no reason for a change, in the case of our present Mayor, especially as he has given more per-sonal attention to the interests of the city than perhaps any of his predecessors. since such principles will not be likely to be adhered to, the least expensive and the most efficient method of getting the best men nominated and elected to our city offices, is to have non-partisan or citizen's

SENATOR DAWES' SUCCESSOR.

As the time for the election of a senator approaches, there is becoming manifest a drift of public opinion in favor of Governor Robinson. As he is personally disinclined to accept the office, this drift of opinion is important, as indicating the man who, in spite of his unwillingness to be a candi-date, is really, in the public estimation, the best qualified. His conduct in the public and political offices which he had held, has been greatly to his credit and that of the state. He has firm principles based on conscience and a sense of what is right and just, not assumed or turned to suit the current of public opinion, with broad and liberal views, and great powers of oratory and argument. His last two speeches—one at the Business Men's meeting in Faneuil hall, and the other at the Harvard celebration were remarkably fine and strong, and show him to be really one of the foremost orators of the day.

's efforts to obtain the senat riat prize are well known. He endeavored by a combination with Democrats to supplant Senator Hoar, and now, while pro-fessing great personal regard for Mr Dawes, is scheming to push him from his seat and secure it for himself. Such an seat and secure it for bimself. Such an open and undisguised scramble for place should be rebuked, the more so, because with all his gifts as a finished and graceful speaker and pleasant, affable manners, he is really a man without strong convictions or courage—a trimmer and a politician who seeks chiefly his own personal ad-

Mr. Robinson is undoubtedly disinclined to accept the office, but he would hardlefeel at liberty to refuse it, if tendered t him unsought, and it is to be hoped that the legislature will perform their duty, regardless of mere personal preferences.

THE residents of Boyd street would like to have a chance to vote against those members of the Common Council who have condemned them to flooded cellars for another winter. Even if they do sue for another winter. Even if they do sue the city and secure heavy damages, it will not repay them for the danger to health and the inconvenience they will suffer. Some of the Boyd streeters are so unreasonable as to say that draining their street was fully as necessary as the widening of Waverly avenue, for instance, although it would not have cost a quarter as much

THE fact that five members of the School Committee are to be voted upon at the coming city election should not be forgotten. The members whose terms expire are John A. Gould and Albert B. Putney of Ward 5, Chas. C. Barton and W. D. Philbrick of Ward 6, and Dr. G. W. Shine of Ward 7. Progressive men are wanted upon this committee, men who have an intelligent interest in our school system, and the successors to these gentlemen ought to be selected with great care. Some of the retiring members are too useful to be spared from the board and will undoubtedly be re-elected. The appeal to the women of Newton published to-day presents arguments worth considering, and a movement is on foot which ought to succeed at however, women on the school ceed—to have more women on the school committee. The ladies have called a meet-ing for next Wednesday afternoon at Eliot Hall, to consult upon the matter, Interesting speakers are promised, and the matter is of such importance that a large audience should be present.

THE genial "Autocrat" must be some thing of a Mugwump, for in his poem at the Harvard anniversary he said:

"I see the statesman firm, sagacious, bold,
For life's long conflict cast in amplest mould:
Not his to clamor with the senseless throng
That shouts unshamed "Our party, right or wrong,"
But in the patriot's never-ending fight
To side with Truth, who changes wrong to right."

If we accept Dr. Holmes' definition of a statesman, it will make a fearful havor among the alleged statesmen of the day.

THE estimates for the receipts and expenditures of the city during the coming year are out. The receipts will be over three thousand dollars larger, it is thought, and the appropriations have been made up on a somewhat liberal scale, but the expecta-tion is that the city's valuation will show such an increase, that the increase in the appropriations will not cause a higher rate of taxation. The increase in the appropriation is about $33.000.

Messes. Lodge and Long appear to have settled the question of the Senatorship, "all by themselves," but the people have yet to be heard from. The man whom the people want is Governor Robinson, and although he is laying no plans to get the office, it is very improbable that he would decline if elected.

MR. BLAINE has been in New York looking after his "investments." "He is out of politics, and has no thought of any plots to secure the presidential nomination," but all the same most people believe that the aforesaid "investments" are political ones, meant to yield a handsome return in 1888.

ALL who heard Governor Robinson's after-dinner speech at the Harvard celebration felt like congratulating themselves that the anniversary came before his term had expired.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND certainly can not complain of any want of cordiality on the part of Boston people. Few men have ever had a more enthusiastic reception.

THE BOSTON RECORD gives a new limit to the term "workingmen." It says there were no workingmen at the Fancuil Hall reception to the President, "only clerks, bookkeepers, and mechanics." The Record ought now to tell us who are workingmen.

THE next number of the Atlantic Monthlik next number of the Atlantic Month-ly will contain the full text of Mr. Lowell's address, and Dr. Holmes's poem on the 250th anniversary of Harvard, and will be out on Nov. 23. It makes the number an unusually valuable one.

LADIES who desire to retain their regis tration, so as to be able to vote at the coming city election, should read the Registrars' notice.

THE warrant for the city election is published to-day.

The Boat Club Fair.

The Boat Club Fair.

Attention is called to the coming fair of the Newton Boat Club, (see advertisement). The management are already hard at work, and the committees from each village are organizing. With the resources at its command, the Boat Club will hold a fair and series of evening entertainments excelling everything heretofore attempted in Newton. Something novel and interesting is always expected from them, and they have never yet failed to come up to the highest expectations. Next week we shall begin to publish a steadily increasing list of attractions, and undoubtedly the fair will be the event of the season in the Newtons.

The Emergency Lectures. The Emergency Lectures.

The second Emergency lecture at City Hall, Monday afternoon, was as largely attended as the previous one. Doctor Loring described bleeding from veins and arteries, when and where to apply an improvised tourniquet, and the importance of being able to stop bleeding from any point on the body by local pressure. He also explained the method of cleansing and dressing wounds of all kinds and the first aid to be given in case of burns, scalds, frost-bites and poison-bites. The lecture was fully illustrated by charts, and by the model boy, and the pupils were shown how to tear bandages and how to improvise a tourniquet. After the lecture the police officers were given a chance to practically apply what they had learned during the hour.

It is hoped to establish a branch of the Association here in Newton, and certainly nothing better could be done, as its object is to promote happiness and lessen human suffering. There is no end to the amount of the work a branch could do, and every person ought to know the simple lessons taught in the Emergency lectures, at least. The lectures to the police force are a beginning, and the work thus begun should be followed up. The lectures are popular in the best sense of the term, and as classes are limited to twenty-live, a number of such courses ought to be given here during the coming winter.

TO THE WOMEN OF NEWTON

The responsibility imposed upon women by law in the election of the committee who have charge of the schools has hitherto been very much neglected by the women of New-ton.

very much neglected by the women of Newton.

To create a more active personal interest in the Public Education, it is proposed that we should meet together to confer upon the subject. You are therefore invited to be present at a meeting to be held in Eliot Hall, on Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 3 o'clock, when interesting speakers will give us the result of what has been done in other cities, and place before us the reasons why we should exercise the duty imposed upon us by law.

The meeting is called simply for consultation and enlightenment. No one is committed to anything by coming.

We hope the ladies of Newton will be willing to devote one afternoon to the consideration of so serious a subject.

Major D. T. Bunker.

Maj. D. T. Bunker of Auburndale has just been appointed consul for the United States at Demerara, British Guiana. Maj. Bunker's appointment is considered an admirable one, and he was warmly recommended to the state department by leading business men in Boston, as well as by many of the most influential Democrats and Independents. Maj. Bunker's familiarity with the commercial requirements of the post make him peculiarly fitted for it, he having been in active business in both British and Dutch Guiana for the past four years. He belives that the great opportunity for the revival of American ocean commerce lies in the development of the carrying trade between the ports of this country and the West Indies and South America. Maj. Bunker, though a Democrat for the past twenty years, has been independent in his political actions. He refused to vote for Butler for Governor, and in his three years' service in the Newton city government in which he represented the Auburndale district, he was nominated and elected by Republicans. He was one of the early members of the Massachusetts Reform Club. He was president of the Massachusetts Conservative Soldiers and Sailors' Association, and is a member of the Massachusetts commandery of the Loyal Legion. Maj. Bunker has a fine war record. He served three years and a half in the 3d Massachusetts cavalry, and won a brilliant reputation in scouting. During the siege of Port Hudson he was in command of the cavalry at Baton Rouge. When Banks was blockaded at Alexandria, on the Red river, he wished to communicate with Admiral Porter at Fort D'Russie, and Maj. Bunker, with 24 men, including four scouts, went through the enemy's country fighting, but without the loss of a man, making the distance of 50 miles in the nine hours between 3 o'clock in the atternoon and midnight. This gallant act made Maj. Bunker famous in the army and fleet, and he was highly commended by Admiral Por —Owing to some misunderstanding last week, the notice regarding the course of lectures to be given in the Universalist Church was creatic. The lectures will begin next Sunday evening at 7 p. m. Subject "Victoria of England, the Woman." The lectures will be upon "Noted Women of this Century," including some who are now living. Margaret Fuller, Elizabeth Frye, George Eliot, Harriet Beecher Stowe and others will be found in this category. They will doubtless be of great interest, as well as full of useful information. It is hoped that these lectures may suggest some regular and helpful course of reading to many.

Parlor Literary Union had their —The Parlor Literary Union had their regular meeting Wednesday evening, at Mrs. Soden's. The subject was "City of Venice," and proved to be sufficient to fill many evenings, as the same subject will be continued at the next meeting, giving stereoscopic views of this city, at the house of Mrs. Prescott. Mrs. Gilman read an essay upon Venice, and Mr. Prescott read a paper upon its commerce. Some selections essay upon venice, and all. Frescott read as paper upon its commerce. Some selections of Dickens upon Venice, also from Howells on the same subject, were read, with some Venetian poetry, which filled up an evening delightfully and profitably. This club should be commended and applauded for the good solid work it is doing, which is of benefit to all, as well as very enjoyable.

is of benefit to all, as well as very enjoyable.

—The Goddard Literary Union met in the church parlors on Tuesday evening, and although a private meeting, (members only being admitted,) a large number were present. The programme was entertaining of necessity, being varied and unique in its character, six minutes entertainment being given by each member of the Musical and Literary Committee, which numbers twenty or more. All voted the evening a success, and came to the conclusion that the season was opening with an unusual amount of enthusiasm and interest on the part of members. The first number was a pleasing piano duet by Mr. Bissel and Master Alfred Bissell, from "Tancredi." This was followed by "Chow Chow" an original sketch by Mr. and Mrs. Chaloner, wherein the baby was sadly neglected and art seemed the pet of the family. Miss Alice Jones sang "Fifty Years Ago," in full rich voice, and Mr. Mendall gave in happy mood a selection from Holmes' "Professor at the Breakfast-table." Mrs. Atwood and Mr. Pinklam rendered a duct with great spirit and vivacity, and in dignified brightness Mrs. Dearborn read "The Girl of the Period." An English song "The Bells," was sung by Mrs. Sherwood with rare appreciation of sentiment and fine effect and a humorous character sketch by Mr. Atwood followed. "The Postillion" sung by Mr. Kimball, was a happy surprise, and Mrs. Kimball's Spanish serenade "The Dove" was unique and charming. The entertainment closed with two charades by Mr. Bradishaw, "Metaphysician" and "Great Expectations," the latter sending the company home in jolly humor.

—Last Friday evening the regular Swedenborgian sociable took place at Mrs. J. L. Roberts. A large company were in attendance, and after having exchanged greetings, seated themselves socially and quietly to await the object of the evening. The piano was closed, and a great variety of beautiful and useful baskets were displayed thereon, which were sold at auction by Mr. James Carter of West Newton. The excitement ran high, and the bidding was spirited; a great deal of jollity went the rounds, Mr. Carter being very bright and full of fun. The sum of $171.00 was netted from this little affair, which is to be used towards the fund for the new chapel. An enjoyable evening was passed; light refreshments were served, and the influence of peace and quiet unity which claracterizes this denomination was felt by all. by all.

To the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions $5,000 is bequeathed, the same to be funded, but to be used for the current expenses of the board. —The address of Rev. Mr. Griffis, under the auspices of the Congregational Church, Monday evening, subject, "Fun, facts and fancy about the people of Japan," was of unusnal interest, as it was gleaned from several years of residence among them. On Saturday last fifty and more of the family pupils of the Allen School drove in barges and carriages to Medfield, to the annual husking party at the Allen homestead. They were there joined by the students of the industrial department of the school, its principal, Mr. Jos. A. Allen, and daughters. The rain drove the husking party to the barn floors, where work was carried on with much fun for an hour or more, after which all repaired to the house and partook of a bountiful collation. Fortunately the carriages were water-proof, so

There were a large number of useful and valuable presents, and the happy couple received the hearty congratulations of their friends. —The invitation extended to the teachers of the Sunday school of the Unitarian Church by the Sunday school of the Channing Church, Newton, together with that of the church at Newton Centre, was cordially responded to by a large number. After a season of very pleasant social intercourse, supper was served in their handsome and commodious dining-room, followed by the reading of an interesting paper by Mr. Bates, superintendent of public schools in Canton, which was given at the annual conference recently held in Worcester; also one by Rev. Mr. Spaulding, secretary of the Sunday School Union, interspersed with singing. Before closing, the new Christmas carols published by Mr. Spaulding were rehearsed, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mr. Jaynes. ance and profit may be the first of many others to follow, the company separated.

—At the November meeting of the Historic Genealogical Society in Boston last week, Rev. I. N. Tarbox, D. D., of West Newton, read a paper on the early military chieftains of New England. He referred particularly to Miles Standish, John Mason, John Underhill, Daniel Patrick, and Lyon Gardiner. Others were mentioned, but not in a biographical way. The story concerning each of the foregoing was given in a very interesting way. Standish did service mostly in Plymouth colony; Mason, in Connecticut; Underhill, so long as he was in public station, in Boston; Patrick lived in Watertown, but his service was mostly in Connecticut, as also was the service of Gardiner. All these had seen active service in Holland and other European countries. In the brief discussion which followed the reading, Mr. Paige of Cambridge called attention to the fact that Captain Patrick lived for a while in Cambridge on elevated ground near to Clark's astronomical observatory and that the spot for 200 years and to the present time has been called "Captain's Hill." The presiding officer added, as respects Gardiner, that he rendered service as military engineer in Boston in planning and laying out the fort originally built on Fort Hill.

—In our report of the Chatauqua Circle last week, the compositor made Mr. Davidson quite too venerable—representing him as having been the teacher of Principal Briggs of Lasell Seminary. The sentence as we quote it read: "Reference was made by one of his pupils to Mr. Briggs, the former Principal," etc. The Circle meets on next Wednesday, the 17th, at Mr. Davidson's house on Maple street. All are welcome who are interested in the subject of geology, or who care to learn something about the truly wonderful Chatauqua movement.

—Miss Fish of Milwaukee, a pupil of Sig nor Rotoli, sang soprano in the quartette last Sunday at the Methodist church. In the morning Mr. Dennison sang a solo by Atwood. In the evening, the anthem by Morrison contained a soprano solo and duet for bass and alto, all of which were well rendered, as was also the duet by W. Sterndale Bennett, sung by Mr. and Mrs. Kendall. Rev. Mr. Newhall gave a short and foreible elucidation of the words of St. Peter, "Add to your faith, virtue, courage, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity."

—The concert at Association Hall in Boston on Friday evening, Nov. 5, is spoken of in the Boston papers in a general way as a complete success. We take pride in calling attention to the fact that the chorus was largely composed of Auburndale ladies, and that the leader, under whose direction their success was achieved, is our own Mr. E. B. Kendall. The first part of the concert was miscellaneous, followed by the cantata, "King Rene's Daughter," in which the solos were taken by Miss Jennie Patrick Walker, Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, Miss Mary How, Mrs. Phipps and Mrs. Bradford. Miss Helen Turner of Mald en played a violin solo in charming style, and won hearty applause. A remark of Mr. B. J. Lang, who was present, was heard by one of the chorus. "I don't know that gentleman," said Mr. Lang, 'but he understands his business." Mr. Kendall's early musical education was in Worcester, after which he was for seven or eight years connected with a first class quartette in New York city, of which Miss Henrietta Beebe was the soprano. As a director, his superiority is shown in his perfect repose and self-command. In rehearsals, his skill in selecting the portions which need practice, and thus avoiding unnecessary labor, is appreciated by all who are under his direction. "King Rene's Daughter" will be repeated, by request, in Music Hall, Boston, Nov. 22.

peated, by request, in Music Hall, Boston, Nov. 22.

—Sunday evening, at the monthly missionary concert in the chapel of the Congregational church, Rev. Dr. Baldwin (at present residing in West Newton) gave an interesting address on mission work in China. Having been for nearly forty years engaged in missionary labors in Foochow, he could well set forth the importance of that great field, with an area equal to the whole continent of Europe and a population embracing about a fifth of the inhabitants of the globe. Within the memory of many, the gates so long closed against foreign barbarians have been opened, but there are many obstacles still in the way of progress in mission work. Proud of the age, the wealth, the learning, and the long seclusion of their nation, their prejudices made it hard for them to receive teachers from the West, and believe them when they taught the "Jesus Way," telling of One who spoke with greater authority than their Confucius, and could give eternal life. Their superstition was another hindrance and the language was a most difficult one to acquire, with its many consonauts and varying tones; some of the foreign residents going from Christain lands, but without Christian principles, by their immoral lives or by their shameful traffic in opium, have been as barriers in the way of the Christian religion. Yet it spite of all, the good work had gone on, and the Kingdom was like leaven in that nation; already there were many hearts loyal to the King of Glory, and the persistence which had been the strength of the heathenism of the nation would make strong her Christiannity.

Mr. Rolfe read the first part of "Julius Cæsar" on Saturday in the Shakespeare class.

On Monday morning Mrs. Lincoln prepared in the most skillful and successful manner mutton cutlets, tomato sauce, fried rye muffins, Saratoga and macaroni potatoes. The cutlets were first prepared by wiping with a damp cloth or scraping and removing the skin which has the strong mutton flavor. Each cutlet was dipped in fine bread crumbs, then in egg and again in crumbs, and ricel for eight or ten minutes. Tomato sauce was prepared by boiling one half can of tomato with two cloves, two peppercorns, one teaspoonful of mived herbs and a cup of water, to which was added one tablespoonful of chopped onion fried in one tablespoonful of chopped onion fried in one tablespoonful of butter until yellow. A tablespoonful of corn starch was also stirred into the melted butter and the whole added, with salt and pepper to the boiling sauce, which after simmering ten uninutes should be strained. Rye muffins were made by miving together dry three quarters of a cupful each of flour and rye-meal, one-half tearspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cream tartand one salt spoonful of salt. To threewas added one beaten egg, mixed with one-half cupful of milk. The mixture was then dropped by small tablespoonfuls into fat, which was hot enough to brown a piece of bread while counting shappy faculty of turning themselves over when that a produced excellent, as were also the potatoes, the cutlets and tomato sauce. Next Monday, Nov. 15th, the subject will be backed halibut, egg sauce, snow-flake potatoes, griddle cakes'

The fine weather this autumn has been so favorable for out-of-door games, that the gymnastic exercises have not taken a very prominent place in the daily program. Now, however, the classes are organized and doing good work under Miss Ransom. She is an earnest and intelligent teacher. The work for each pupil is assigned by Dr. Sargent, of the Harvard Gymnasium, according to the weight, size and strength and needs of each young woman, and the results of such careful and systematic training are very different from those when they were all classed together to do the same work. There are nine classes daily.

Miss Call gives her lesson in elocution twice a week by example and by precept, by judicious sarcasm and praise, she leads her class forward toward excellence in the art of reading.

Roll on, O swift and silent years, I would not check your flight; Behind me darkness disappears, Before me dawns the light.

Behind me doubts and fears I scan, Like fading mists of foam; Before me life's unfolding plan Is calling ever "Come!"

Life lies before me strange and grand, Half veiled from my dim eyes; Methinks I see the peaks that stand In yonder far-off skies.

O strange and wondrous human life!
O years of bane or bliss!
My heart leaps up to meet the strife
Of such a world as this.

My pulse beats faster at the thought, My blood flows swifter through: My blood flows swifter through;
O years with hidden meaning fraught,
Come on, I wait for you!

THE PETTY VICES OF THE CAPTAIN

AND HOW HE CAME TO GIVE THEM UP. [Translated from the French of Francois Coppee.]

The name of the little provincial town to which Capt. Mercadier, after six and thirty years of military service, two and twenty campaigns and three wounds received dur-ing those campaigns, retired after being pensioned by a grateful government, is of little consequence. It resembles closely all other towns of its size in the provinces. It has 3000 inhabitants according to the last census,—referred to as souls in that ambitious document. It has a rampart planted with fine old oaks, a pretty river runs directly through it; there is an old church built in beautiful florid gothic; hind this sacred edifice, however, runs a horrible street—alley rather—which leads directly into the quarter St. Sulpice. Every Monday morning the grass of the Place is enameled with the big red and blue umbrellas of the market women and blockaded by the two-wheeled carts of the farmers. During the rest of the week it is given over to that calm and peaceful solitude so delicious to its few but habitual visitors. delicious to its few but habitual visitors. The streets are paved with cobble-stones. Through the parlor windows of the low houses one observes now and then bridal bouquets and funeral wreaths, both very brown and withered, carefully preserved under glass. From over the low garden gates one catches sight frequently of wooden statutes of Napoleon the Great perched uneasily upon small mounds of white, shining shells. The largest inn in the place bears, of course, the name L'Ecu de France.

shining shells. The largest inn in the place bears, of course, the name L'Ecu de France.

Capt. Mercadier had chosen this particular little town for the simple, perhaps sentimental, reason that he had been born and passed the years of his riotous youth there. He had, it is true, neither relations nor friends in the town; every one belonging to him had been for many a year peacefully resting under the green sod of the small cemetery, and yet the veteran had returned to end his days there and in due time to fill one more grave in the already crowded church-yard. He was not a good, a pious man, the captain. He had had Lamoriciere for a commander. The duke of Nemours, near whom he had received his first wound, had decorated him on the battle-field at Algiers. He had been a prisoner of Abdel-Kader. On his bronzed neck a white scar made by a yatagan was plainly visible above his high military coat collar. A bullet was still lodged in his shoulder, another in his hip. Yet in spite of dueis, debts of honor and the blandishments unsuccessfully resisted of the almond-eyed Jewesses of Algiers, Mercadier had succeeded in painfully winning at the point of his bayonet and sword, the rank of captain of the list regiment of triailleurs. And now, after six and thirty years of active service, our hero, having received his pension money of some 2000 francs and an additional 250 francs from his decoration of the cross of the Legion of Honor, was retired from duty and relegated to that state of honorable penury, the reward reserved by a grateful country for her old and worn-out heroes.

The captain's entry into the city of his birth created no sensation. He arrived one morning perched upon the seat of the diligence, an unlighted cigar held tightly between his teeth, and already on terms of intimacy with the coachman, to whom during the journey he had related the episode of the "passage of the Portes de Fer." Nor was the worthy warrior at all displeased at the divided attention given by his auditor to his tale, who did not hesitate ance. Capt. Mercadier had chosen this particuastonished to see a man decorated with the red ribbon of the Legion (a rara avis in the provinces) drinking familiarly with the coachman who had driven him into town. Arrived at his destination the captain was at home directly. His first thought was to seek for a lodging. One was found at last in one of the suburbs. In the courtyard of the house two lean, tethered cows were grazing upon the scanty herbage, some ducks and hens quacked and cackled amongst the legs of these quadrupeds. The pastoral aspect of the spot found favor in the eyes of the war-worn soldier. Preceded by the clumsy peasant woman, the land-lady, he ascended the rickety wooden staircase, smelling strongly of the adjacent stable, and followed her into the chamber. The walls of this room were hung with paper of a peculiar pattern. Upon a dingy white ground colossal figures of blue were drawn. The paper represented (the motif repeated incessantly) Joseph Poniatowski on horseback, fording the river Eibe. This monotonous decoration, appealing unconsciously to the military recollections of the veteran, was the sole reason of his taking the apartment. He failed to notice that the windows were dingy, the furniture rickety, the narrow bed hung with curtains of dirty dimity anything but inviting.

A quarter of an hour later he had had his portmanteau fetched him, had unpacked it, hung his two suits of clothes up in the worm-eaten wardrobe, pitched his boots into a corner, placed over the dim, had unpacked it, hung his two suits of clothes up in the worm-eaten wardrobe, pitched his boots into a corner, placed over the dim, had unpacked it, hung his two suits of lothes up in the worm-eaten wardrobe, pitched his boots into a corner, placed over the dim, had unpacked it, hung his two suits of lothes up in the worm-eaten wardrobe, pitched his boots into a corner, placed over the dim, had unpacked it, hung his two suits of lothes up in the worm-eaten wardrobe, pitched his boots into a corner, placed over the dim, he bought a pound of candles, a bar of soap and a bottle of rum, Capt. Mercadier, depositing his purchases on the only table in the room, cast about him the look of a man entirely satisfied with his surroundings. Then with the promptitude learned from a life passed in camps, he shaved himself, brushed the dust from his coat, and setting his cap jauntily over one ear, set out in search of a cafe.

II.

The finding of a cafe to his mind was a matter of no small importance to the captain. It was there he could indulge to his heart's content his three petty vices—smoking, card-playing and absinthe drinking. But a cafe just to his liking was in this small town hard to find. After waiking about until he was thoroughly tired out, he came across the Cafe Prosper, situated as every one knows, at the alley of the Place de Marche and the Rue de la Parnasse. It certainly was not his ideal of a cafe, but it was the best he had met with in his travels about the town. Its exterior was decidedly provincial. Three stunted yew trees in green boxes stood in front of the door. In the narrow court-yard long benches placed before tables covered with waxed cloth were standing. But the interior the captain found was more to his taste.

He was charmed by the cordial welcome

He was charmed by the cordial welcome he received from the plump, fresh-complexioned dame du comptoir, who presided over her domain in a well-fitting print gown, and with a scarlet ribbon binding up her well-oiled tresses. He returned the greeting of this personage with military politeness. Seating himself at one of the small tables he declared to himself that the room was pleasant and well furnished, the floor nicely sanded, and the panels on which were painted beautiful equestriennes and resplendent guardsmen, ambling through country lanes bordered with hollyhocks and roses, were especially to his taste. And the absinthe, which he ordered presently from the waiter, was—well!—better than he had hoped for.

A week later, and he had become an habitue of the Cafe Prosper. The advent of the captain was a God-send to the trequenters of the cafe, men bored to death by the monotony of the life one is compelled to lead in a provincial town of 3000 inhabitants. The veteran was an adept at all games of chance, a delightful raconteur, fighting his battles over again with an enthusiasm which never flagged or wearied. And the captain in his turn was enchanted to find an audience to whom his worn-out stories were fresh and new. His particular friends and cronies, were first, the proprietor of the cafe, an animated human beer-cask, silent and heavy of aspect, always in his shirt-sleeves and with a pie perpetually between his teeth. Second, the auctioneer, a cheerful, lively person, dressed in faded shiny black, and looked down upon by his companions in the cafe for his miserly habit of pocketing and carrying away with him the two lumps of sugar which remained in his sancer, after he had drunk his cup of coffee. Third, the tax-collector, a personage of gentle disposition and feeble health; given to solving the rebuses and charades in the illustrated papers and seading the solutions signed with his initials to the editors. Fourth and last, the veterianry surgeon—the only one who, in his united characters of democrat and free-t ties the half-pay.

sleep under the stair-case and you wake me up every night when you come back from the cafe."
"Truly, petite? I shall take care to tread more lightly it future. How old are you?"
"Yho was old manigure almost."

"Nine years old, monsieur—almost."
"The landlady—is she a relative of yours?"

"Oh no, monsieur, I am only a servant."
"What are your wages?"

"What I eat and my bed under the stairs."

"And how did this happen?" pointing to the wooden-stump.

"A kick from a cow when I was five years old, monsieur."

"Have you a father or mother?"

"The child grew red suddenly under her sunburn. "I came out of the foundling hospital," she answered shortly; and courtesying awkardly she limped away.

"Confound it." soliloquized the captain, hours later, on his way to the cafe, "here is something all wrong. Quite out of reason. When a soldier loses an arm or a leg, he is sure of a shelter at the Invalids—he is well taken care of there and has besides money from his medal for his tobacco. An officer—he has his pension, and the chance of finding a rich wife in the provinces. But this baby—a cripple—obliged to work—half starved, too—naked almost"—the captain, try as he may, cannot banish the thought of the wretched infant from his mind.

By this time he has reached the cafe, but something, he cannot tell what, prevents him from entering it. He returns home and ascends to his chamber. Suddenly how sordid, how neglected, it appears to him. The curtains of his bed are, as he sees for the first time, of the tint of a well-colored meerschaum pipe, the hearth is littered with burned-out matches and the stumps of cigars. Even the paper on the walls, where the splendid lancier of Leipsic repeats a hundred times his renowned feat of fording the Elbe, presents no longer any attraction to the eyes of the captain. He opens the door of his wardrobe—what a lamentable spectacle of toru trousers, ragged stockings, buttonless shirts meets his appalled gaze.

"Decidedly I must have a servant." he ged stockings, buttonless shirts meets his appalled gaze.

"Decidedly I must have a servant," he determines, "and that lame child will just suit me. I will rent the adjoining room for her. Winter is coming, and the child will freeze there lying on the bare floor under the stairs. She can take care of my clothes and brush up a bit. These quarters are disgraceful."

But here a sudden thought causes the captains brow to darken. Pay-day is still a half a month away and his account for absinthe at the cafe is already a formidable one.

THE PETTY VICES OF THE CAPTAIN.

price for meals is dear, horribly dear; and that confounded horse-dector wins from me at bezique like fun. I have had to pay for his absinthe for a week. Who knowsperhaps la petite can cook a little. A cup of coffee in the morning, a plate of soup at midday, a snack at night—we might, we must manage it!"

The captain finds the idea so pleasant and practicable that he descends to the court-yard in search of his iandiady. He finds her in company with the little cripple, sweeping out the stable.

"Does she," inquires the captain abruptly, pointing to the child,—'does she know how to sew—to cook a bit?"

"Who? Pierrette?—of course] she does. She came from the foundling; one is not petted and pampered there, I tell you."

"My child," continues the captain, calling the little girl to him, "you are not afraid of me—really? And you, madame, will you let me have her? I need a servant."

"Oh, if you are willing to burden yourself with her I have no objections."

"Then it is settled," returns the captain joyfully. "Look, here are 20 francs; see that she has by this evening a decent frock and a shoe. To-morrow we can arrange the rest."

And giving Pierrette a slight tap on the

And giving Pierrette a slight tap on the cheek, the captain strides away, well pleased that he has arranged the matter satisfactorily.

"Captain, you are a deserter, a traitor!" was the exclamation which saluted him one evening some weeks later on entering the cafe.

was the exclamation which saluted him one evening some weeks later on entering the cafe.

Strive as hard as he may, the veteran cannot quite cover up all traces of his charity. Already he has found it necessary to sacrifice his morning glass of absinthe to enable him to meet the additional drain on his slender income. Pierrette, full of gratitude toward her protector, has changed entirely the aspect of the domain over which she rules supreme. The furniture is kept free of dust, the hearth decently swept, spider-webs no longer dangle from the ceiling. When the captain after his matutinal walks returns home to breakfast, the smell of the good soup salutes his nostrils as soon as he has set his foot on the lowest step of the stair-case. The chamber he finds neatly arranged, the soup-plate smoking upon a small table covered with a clean white cloth, a tiny nosegay in a cracked wine-glass standing before him.

Pierrette, taking advantage of her master's constant kindness and indulgence, has ventured to disclose to him some secret wishes, some small ambitions of hers, as regards the housekeeping. It was necessarry, she affirmed, to have a pair of brass andirons upon the tiled hearth, and it would be nice to have a mold for the cake she baked so well and that he liked so much. In order to gratify these modest wishes of his protege, the captain the next day replenished his cigar-case with cigars of a cheaper brand than those he had been in the habit of smoking—refused to allow his adversary, the veterinary surgeon, the usual five points at ecarte, and absolutely declined to order a third glass of beer and a second of Chartreuse.

Certainly the struggle with his cherished weaknesses, his beloved small vices, was a long and cruel one, but the victory was complete and perfect.

Very much to his surprise the captain discovered that he loved Pierrette more and more for every act of self-sacrifice she costs him.

She ceased soon to be his servant—she was to him a child—a dearly leved daugh-and more for every act of self-sacrifice she costs him.

She ceased soon to be his servant—she was to him a child—a dearly leved daughter. One day seeing her standing behind his chair at dinner-time, he had called out to her: "Kiss me and sit down here at the table by me—aud eat with me. Mille ton-nerres!"

to her: "Kiss me and sit down here at the table by me—aud cat with me. Mille tonnerres!"

5 And to-day it is finished. The captain has fought and won his last victory. He adores this little cripple who limps about his cosy and well furnished apartment. And the child in her turn has saved him from a lonely, a loveless old age. Already he has taught Pierrette to read, and sets her copies in his stiff old-fashioned handwriting, as stiff and upright as the captain's own figures.

His one trouble is that he may die and leave Pierrette unprovided for. He has grown almost miserly for her sake. Tea has replaced absinthe—the Cafe Prosper knows him no more. He would long ago have given up his beloved tobacco for her sake, but this the girl would not allow. On the contrary it is she who sees that the empty eigar-case is always promptly replenished, and with cigars too of the choicest brand.

Capt. Mercadier's one hope and chief prayer is that by strict economy he may before he dies be able to save enough out of his pension, to set Pierrette in a small millier's shop. Then after he is dead his protege may live an honorable and peaceful life,—keeping perhaps in the little room back of the shop his cross of the Legion hung up over the chimney-piece, in remembrance of her captain.

Every fine afternoon the two walk together on the ramparts. The passers by cast many a kind look at the old soldier and his crippled companion.

One day the captain was moved to tears of joy when a stranger exclaimed in passing—"Poor father!—and the daughter—she is really pretty!"—[Springfield Republican.

AN ELECTRIC MOTOR

WHICH MAY SOLVE THE PROBLEM OF STREET LOCOMOTION.

The following extract from an article in The following extract from an article in the Boston Traveller will be read with interest here, on account of the street railway discussion: "People in all sections of the country recognize in electricity the power which will move the world in the future. Many experiments have been made in the past in applying this electrical power to horse cars, but as yet no system has been devised in which each car can be operated independently of each other car in the system. At Montgomery, Ala., and at some other towns in the South and West, there is a system of electric railways in operations which acts as a whole, so to speak. That is, if an accident happens at the battery, all the cars are obliged to cease running, which naturally causes not a little disturbance. About one year ago Prof. Main obtained a patent for a new electric motor, which it would seem would supply the deficiency in street railway power which has been so long prevalent. The motor is so simple in its construction that it is a wonder that it has not been discovered before.

It is circular in form and consists fyst of a central copper coil, and at each side of the Boston Traveller will be read with inthic is a steel wheel, made in suchta manner that the spokes of one leave a series of magnets which join the sides of the motor together, as the spokes of the other approach these same magnets. Thus, the whole secret of the motor is simply magnetic attraction. The motor on a small scale is about to be put on the market for the working of sewing machines and small machines of a variety of classes. Larger-sized motors are now being made for the purpose of applying them to horse cars. A 10-horse power motor which is to be the size applied to surect cars, will be some 20 inches in diameter and will weigh some 200 pounds, and will be placed on the front platform. A belt will connect the motor with the front aske, and thus transmit the power which will move the car. The batteries will be placed under the cars. The patent is controlled in New York by the River & Rail Electric Company, and a company is now being organized in Boston to control the patent in Massachusetts, and possibly throughout New England.

The company propose to retain the ownership of all the motors, and the railway companies would materially reduce the company for change of tracks or laying a cable, and the company propose to experiment as soon as possible on some of the cars in Boston, and thus show to the satisfaction of the railway company whether or not the invention is worthy of adoption or not. The motor has been examined by many street-railway officials throughout the country, and they are one and all most favorably impressed with the invention. One prominent cable railway president expresses it as his opinion that the motor will be generally introduced before many years and will seriously push the cable system. However this may be, it would certainly seem as if the invention was —The Improvement Society Chorus held its second meeting in Mason Hall on Monday evening, Mr. F. H. Wood leader and pianist. Quite a large number of new members presented themselves, showing the public appreciation of Mr. Wood's tnition, and the advantages apparent of having the fine trained voices of Mrs. D. A. W. White, Miss Leonora Couseus, and excellent tenor and bass voices to lead and render the solos. After the classification of the members, several songs and a glee were practiced. It is expected that some fine voices will be discovered among the younger members, if they devote themselves to the instruction given.

is 1,175 pounds, diameter three feet four inches. It will be stored for future service. It was first rung in 1856, when Dr. Steams was the new pastor, and the building had been remodelled. The exterior of the church has not been materially altered since that time. In the spring of 1879 it received its present quaker brown coat of paint, and in July of the same year was damaged by a tornado which barely spared it.

—On Wednesday evening, November 3d, the members of the Institution and friends from the village filled the chapel to hear the reports of the delegates who attended the Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance. Mr. Deering gave a synopsis of the meetings of the Alliance. Mr. Hutchinson spoke of the needs of the home and foreign field, as presented at the Alliance. Mr. Fuller made the application to the students. The meeting was one of wonderful power; not that so many new facts were presented, as that all three men enforced the truth of the call of the foreign work, because, at the Alliance meetings, they had given themselves to that work. Men went away from the chapel in some cases to pray together, in others with new convictions as to their own relation to Foreign Missions, and, probably in every case, with a more thorough consecration. Steps have been taken to form a mission band, composed of those who will sign a paper pledging themselves to look to foreign countries as their first choice for their life's work.

"The new house of worship recently erected by the First Baptist Church in Newton, was opened with public services on Thursday the 22d. The introductory prayer by Rev. Mr. Gilbert of the Congregational Church, West Par.sh; reading of select portions of the Scripture by Rev. O. Crane of the Second Baptist Church; sermon by the surviving pastor of the Church; dedicatory prayer by Rev. Prof. Chace. The house is extremely neat, chaste, and commodious, and has been adapted as far as possible to the convenience of the Theological Institution, for anniversary occasions, A spirit of great sacrifice and self denial has been manifested by most of the members of the church in struggling through this arduous enterprise with their scanty and hitherto inadequate means. In entering this new house, their feelings of joy have been necessarily blended with a tinge of melancholy, as they took leave of the house where their fathers worshipped, with the last offices of respect to him who had so long adorned it."

F. A. W.

The reference to the last public service in the old meeting house, is to the funeral of the senior pastor, Rev. Dr. Joseph Grafton, Dec. 20th, 1836, on which occasion Rev. Dr. Homer, Rev. Dr. Sharp of Boston, and Professer Chace shared in the service. Father Grafton, as he was called, was born in Newport, R. I., in 1757, and educated in Providence, In June, 1788, he was ordained. Rev. Dr. Isaae Backurs presided at the council. His pastorate lasted forty-eight years and six months, and was rich in gracious labors. During the war of the Revolution, Mr. Grafton became acquainted with the Marquis de Lafayette, and when forty years afterward he revisited this country and received the people, on the steps of the State House in Boston, he met Father Grafton and recognized him. A ballad of Mrs. Emily W. Clark's written within a few years describes the scene.

"But now once more in Boston, Upon the State House stair, He saw among the strangers Thronging to meet him there, One somewhat quaint of figure, Somewhat old-fashioned grown, In breech-s, hose and buckles, With wig of rusty brown;

And might have seen unnoting Save for a piercing glance, A look still unforgotten Through far-off years in France,

That woke a recognition, A throb of pleased surprise; He cried, 'There's Mr. Grafton! I know him by his eyes.'

Though years have left their traces, No marks of age disguise The soul, that looks out grandly Through Father Grafton's eyes."

The Island of Capri.

The Island of Capri.

Rev. Francis Tiffany began his course in the Boston Christian Union on Thursday evening of last week. The Herald says that Mr. Tiffany is one of the many subjects to the charm which Italy weaves around all travellers of impressionable nature who enter her domain. He has the gift of casting the same spell about others, for he thoroughly delighted the audience that filled Norcross Hall, with the lecture on "The Island of Capri in the Bay of Naples." Mr. Tiffany, as may be surmised from the preceding, has the qualifications of a genuine traveller, one who journeys to learn. He has a passionate love of nature—a love which includes not only a keen appreciation of landscape beauty, a perception both of its grandeur and its subtlest influences, but the love of human nature that belongs to a man of warm heart, quick in sympathy, and so responsive to the impressions made thereon by the manifold keys of his senses that his journeyings give him that real knowledge of the world which teaches how excellent a thing is man, his brother; and Mr. Tiffany possesses the rarer faculty of translating these impressions into adequate language that enables others to feel with him.

Mr. Tiffany's introduction to Capri was an admirable piece of wood-painting, showing the scene from the cliffs of Sorrento with the jewelled waters below, the exquisite trend of the coast, and the transfiguring veil of the sun-woven atmosphere, with the Island out in the bay, in shape like a huge couchant splynx, working an irresistible spell upon the beholder, who finally resolves to "see Capri or die!" So he takes us to the island and makes us intimate with its Titantic rock structure, which would be savage in aspect but for the innumerable bits of cultivation with terraced vineyards occupying all nooks where they can find space, the lovely flowers blooming everywhere, and the miracle-working effect of the Italian atmosphere, so that there were moments when the island on which they stood seemed no more papable than the islands flowers blooming everywhere, and the miracle-working effect of the Italian atmosphere, so that there were moments when the island on which they stood seemed no more palpable than the islands of heaven that glorify one of our incomparable American sunsets. Making his hearers acquainted with the people, he pictured the dawning aspect of the multitude always assembled about the marina, the centre of life on the island, and gave an enchanting picture of the beauty of the Capri girls, for in ages far back Capri formed a part of Magna Greecia, and the beautiful Greek type still repeats itself there. One of these beauties was the donkey girl, Concetta, whom his party engaged, and who charmed them all with the winning frankness of her south Italian nature and confidences about her sailor lover. Mr. Tiffany gave eloquent expressions to the intangible influence of history on landscape as illustrated by the rich part of Capri and the beautiful bay, and the ruined Villa of Tiberius afforded him his chief example in the spectre of the wast, cruel and gloomy presence of the misanthropic emperor which haunts the spot. In this, the lecturer proved the strength of his historical perception, which is accompanied by the artistic literary gift by which he characterizes and portrays the figures of the past and invests them with vitality.

The Chrysanthemum Show.

Horticultural Hall in Boston has been the centre of attraction for lovers of flowers this week, and has well repaid visitors. A large number of Newton florists were represented. E. H. Fewkes & Son of Newton Highlands had some beautiful hybrids, which Mr. Fewkes explained as due to cross-fertilization. "A Chinese plant stands by one of the Japanese varieties, and they exchange pollen so that the next generation is a cross between the two. If the cross is made wisely the plant is an improvement; if not, it is a slip down hill, and has all the bad features of both with none of their good ones." The Messrs. Fewkes' collection comprised well formed and beautifully colored flowers, in yellow, pink, terra cotta and bronze, and numbered about a hundred plants. The Messrs. Fewkes took most of the fine premiums offered, and E. A. Wood of West Newton received several premiums. The lower hall contained the exhibition of cut flowers and fruits, which was a very attractive one. Mrs. M. T. Goddard received first prize for red cabbage, and a gratuity for fine collection of fruits. Horticultural Hall in Boston has been —In a temperance sermon delivered in Graee church, by the rector last Sunday morning, he took the ground that safety against the vice of intemperence, and reformation from it, can be hoped for only from the building up of the moral nature. He urged temperance upon the ground that its opposite was a sin against the body, a violation of Christian vows, and the setting in motion a series of exils most the setting in motion a series of evils most disastrous in human experience.

The design is full length figures represented to indicate the use of the various rooms. At the parlor is a leave-taking; at the reception a greeting or introduction; at the drawing-room the figures are dancing; at the library a little fellow well laden with books; and waiters carrying to and fro fruit, etc., plannly show the way to the dining-room. Over the door leading to the grounds, games are represented. The attitudes, draperies and court costumes are remarkably fine. The frieze has created much attention and admiration. #### Channing Church Fair.

Channing Church Fair.

The fair at the parlors of the Channing Church attracted a large crowd on Tuesday and was the most successful one that has been held for years. It is estimated that over $700 was realized, which is certainly creditable to the ladies who had charge. Lunch was served in the Sunday-school room during the day, and a hot turkey supper with all the accessories from 6 to 8 in the evening. There was a constant succession of hungry people, who kept all the tables well filled during those two hours, and the young ladies who assisted as waiters found plenty to do. Mrs. Benjamin Merritt and Mrs. Daniel Stearns had charge of the supper room, and proved very efficient hostesses. Mrs. Alden and Mrs. Hobart had charge of the dainty lunches that were served during the day. The fair proper was held in the church parlors, which presented a very attractive sight, especially in the evening when the gas was lighted, and the brilliant colors of the articles of fancy work and the beauties of the flower table were brought out. Each of the tables was prettily decorated, and the flower table was arranged upon the stage, which was rendered very attractive by a large number of chrysanthemums in pots, besides the great variety of cut flowers. Miss Mabel Kenrick and Miss Alice Angier had charge, and their friends gave them pienty to do during the afternoon and evening. The fancy tables were presided over by Mrs. Drew, Mrs. Byfield. Mrs. Perry, Miss Blauchard, Mrs. Lowell and Mrs. Soule, two serving at each of the three tables. Their trade was very brisk, and by the end of the evening most of the stock was disposed of, without any reduction in the prices marked. The art table was superintended by Mrs. Crosby and Mrs. Sawin, and was covered with all conceivable kinds of amateur art work, placques, pictures, blotters, etc., the most attractive being the charmingly ornamented bone dishes, which met with a ready sale. The Sunday School table was presided over by Miss Mabel Hall, and was a popular stopping place. At the cand

Hospital Sunday.

Every body should put something extra in his pocket before he goes to church on Sunday, the 21st, for the Hospital Collection. This suggests the rather striking but very correct view taken by a minister recently in an address. He begged the people not to put pennies in the box, for, said he, if any one is able to give only a penny, he is too poor to give anything, and if he can give more, it is an insult to a good cause to give so little.

The board of Aldermen met Monday evening, his honor Mayor Kinaball presiding. All the mem-bers were present. The minutes of the last meet-ing were read and approved. The officers of the Street Railway and Electric Light Companies Street Railway and Electric Light Companies were present as usual.

Mayor Kimball read a communication from Mes-rs. Sylvester and Rowe, the contractors who built the Auburndale tunnel, offering bonds in $2,500, to cover the mechanics' liens that could be placed on the tunnel, and presenting Messrs.

Wm. A. Holmes of Boston, and Chas. C. Barton of Newton as their bondsmen. They were accepted. The bonds are to be good for 35 days, the time in which liens can be placed on the tunnel, and is a formality to allow of the contract price being paid in full, and secure the city from any possible loss.

Alexander Tyler, appointed as a Democratic election officer in Ward 5, handed in his resignation, as the Democrats refused to accept his services, on the ground that he did not vote the Democratic ticket.

D. N. B. Coffin asked to have his three houses on Pelham street, Newton Centre, properly numbered, and the matter was referred to the committee on licenses. Alderman Nickerson said that a gentleman had been to see him recently, and offered to number the houses in the city, and do the work systematically, without expense to the city, as he would get his pay from those owning buildings.

A communication was received from Dr. Bunker, the city veterinary surgeon, stating that he had dis-covered a case of glanders in a bay horse belonging to Louis Brunnel, on Adams street, and J. F. Win-chester, one of the state cattle commissioners, had been notified, as the law directed, and he had ordered the horse isolated, to await further developments, and a consultation between other mem-bers of the commission.

Alderman Powers presented a petition from George Linder, to have gas lamps erected on the new street to be called Park avenue; referred to the lamp committee.

Alderman Pettee presented a petition from L.

P. Everett and others of Newton Upper Falls, stating that they owned two small buildings, used as boat houses, located on land recently purchased by the city from Mr. Butts. The latter had generously allowed the houses to be located on his land, and the petitioners asked that the city do the same until other waveneents should be made same, until other arrangements should be made on the land needed for other purposes; referred to

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Alderman Pettee presented the report of the Special Committee, Chief of Fire Department Henry L. Bixby, City Engineer Noyes, and Superintendent of streets Fuller, for determining the location of electric light poles. The report provided for the location of the poles on one side of the street enly, that the wires should cross the streets only where absolutely necessary, and then at we want where absolutely necessary, and then at as near a right angle as possible. The streets named were the same as asked for in the petition of the com-right angle as possible. The streets named were the same as asked for in the petition of the company.

City Engineer Noves was called upon, and explained the report at length. He said that there had been a relocation of the poles, to a considerable extent, as it was not deemed advisable or allow the company to use the telephone or fire alarm poles, or to cross the streets indiscriminately. It was best to allow the company to locate the poles, as they could then follow out the wishes of the property owners in front of whose estates the poles would be set. The wires should be from 20 to 25 feet above the ground.

A recess was than taken to examine the plans drawn up by Engineer Smille.

After the recess Alderman Fiske presented an order granting the Electric Light company the location asked for, subject to the statutes of the state, and to the existing city ordinances, and those to be passed. The writing was a lengthy one, and the poles used must be of cedar or chest nut, the wires to be at least 15 feet from the ground, and 20 feet at the street crossings. The location granted was stated to be the same as that recommended by the committee.

Alderman Mason asked the city solicitor whether if the location was granted, if the board could hereafter pass an ordinance for the regulation of the electric lighting, and if the rights of the city would be as well protected as though the ordinances were passed before the location was granted.

'Mr. Slocum replied that he could not conceive of a case where any rights of the city would suffer.

Alderman Pettee said that it was like beginning at the ridge pole to build a house, and work downward. Nevertheless if the rights of the city were sufficiently protected, he was willing to vote for it. Alderman Fiske said that the board were obliged to give the location, unless it could be shown that the streets would be seriously incommoded by the wires. After more discussion the writing was passed, and the Electric Light matter is settled. OTHER MATTERS.

Alderman Nickerson presented the report of the ighway Committee, on the petition asking that e corners of Grant avenue and Beacon street be unded off, and recommended that it be granted, the corners or crant avenue and Beacon street be rounded off, and recommended that it be granted, the work to be done in conformity with the plans drawn by the city engineer. No damages were chained, and none were awarded. An order was passed for a hearing on the matter, on Tuesday, Dec. 7, at 7,39 p. m., before the board of aidismen, and on Monday, Dec. 13th, before the common council, and that Horner Courseas, Robert R. Bishot, and others interested be not file d to appear. Alderman Nickerson presented the report of the highway committee on the petition of R. M. Pulsifer and others, for the laying out of Melrose street, and recommended that it be granted. An order was passed that those interested be notified, and hearings appointed before the addenner at 8 p. in, Dec. 7th, and before the common council on the 48th.

Alderman Fiske moved that notice he given of Dec. 7th, and before the common council on the 43th.

Alterman Fiske moved that notice be given of the application of Simon A. White of Ward 2, for permission to put a 10 horse power and engine into his bailding, and a hearing be appointed for Thessay, Dec. 7th at 8 p. m. before the board of aldermen and on the 13th, before the common council. The petition of Patrick Harley for permission to creect a store house and butcher shop on Eoytson Six. at Ward 5, and of Simon A. White to exact a carpet cleaning establishmen in Ward 2, were referred to the board of health.

The notice of Wm. Pettigrew, of his intention to creet a dwelling house on Washington street. Ward 3, 35 by 35 feet, was placed on file.

The finance committee reported their estimates of the city's expenses and receipts for the coming year, in order to facilitate business, as the matter should have come before the common council at their last meeting, but by some blunder they failed to take it up.

Alderman Grant presented an order, authorizing the city treasurer to sell and dispose of 4 per cent water bonds, not to exaced $34,000, the money to be used for the water construction account.

An order was passed appropriating $25,350 for the expenses of the city during the mouth of De-used for the water construction account. An order was passed appropriating $28,350 for e expenses of the city during the month of December.

The joint committee on ordinances reported an ordinance for the regulation of electric lighting apparatus, and it was referred back to the commit-tee, in order to give the representatives of the company a hearing.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

At the motion of Alderman Mason the street railway petition was taken from the table. He said that the committee on ordinances had been considering the rules and regulations to be reported, but there were so many things to discuss, that the committee were not ready to report. He therefore asked that the street railway matter be postponed until Dec. 7th. His reason for making the motion, was that one of the aldermen was very anxious to leave, but he did not wish to go if the street railway question was to come up for discussion.

At the motion of Alderman Fiske, it was afterwards.

go it the street railway question was to come up for discussion.

At the motion of AldermanFiske, it was afterwards reconsidered, and postponed to the next meeting of the board, to be held as soon as the council has sufficiently progressed with the appropriation bills, to allow of action being taken upon them. The bills must be passed this month, and the meeting will cither be held next week or on the 29th instant. The date is left to the discretion of the Mayor.

ALDERMAN GRANT EXPLAINS.

Alderman Grant moved to take from the table the resolution passed by the Common Council, in regard to the walks of the Williams School, and the board do not concur. He read from the GRAPHIC'S roport of the proceedings in the Council, the speech of a councilman, (Mr. Atherton,) in which Mr. Grant was charged with refusing to allow the remainder of the appropriation for the Williams School improvements to be expended in concreting the walks. He said that the statement made by the councilman was totally incorrect. There was no special appropriation of $2.50 for the Williams School as stated. That sum might have been mentioned by the public property committee of last year as required, but no special sum was set apart, and the committee this year had spent the money as the work required it should be. As regards the Williams School house, the committee intended to do the concreting if the money held out, but $2.000 had had to be expended that was not anticipated at the beginning of the year, and the committee had had to cat down elsewhere. $400 had been taken from Ward 2 buildings, and the same thing had been done in Ward 6 and elsewhere, and the committee had had to be expended that was not anticipated at the appropriation. The work about the Williams School house had not been left to the chairman of the proceeded on that basis, and cut down where it was possible, in order to keep within the appropriation. The work about the Williams School house had not been left to the chairman of the proceeded on that basis, and cut down where it was possible, in order to keep within the appropriation. The work about the Williams School house. The chairman of the public property committee had looked after the work and had approved. On the 30th of September, at a meeting at which all the members but this councilman were present, the chairman was directed by the committee had looked after the work and had app ALDERMAN GRANT EXPLAINS.

The Reason Why.
"The most striking thing about Boston, now that John L. Sullivan has left town," writes a New York exile, "is the crowded condition of all passenger trains leaving the city. This unpleasant state of things becomes less and less marked, however, as the distance from Boston increases, and the suburban population is gradually re-ab-the suburban population is gradually re-absorbed."

The main fact of this statement is noted with singular accuracy, but its explanation evinces a wonderful lack of penetration on the part of the observer. The real reason for this over-crowding is as follows:

When a Boston man leaves home he is brought down to the train in a safe-mover's wagon, and lifted on board with a derrick. He is a big man there, and fills a great deal of the ear. But as his native town recedes, he shrinks to his normal proportions, and by the time the train reaches New York he has shrunk down to the size of a boy, with the result above noted.

When he comes back he is able to travel on a half ticket, thus saving expense.

This explains why incoming trains become more and more closely packed as they near the Hub.—F. E. Chase, in Life.

(Written for the Graphic TWO MODERN HERMITS.

We had been whirling our tricycles for a fortnight in the south of France, traversing the country of Provence, the land of the Troubadours, crossing and recrossing the Rhone and Durance rivers, visiting the Roman ruins, the Amphitheatres, the Pont Aqueduct, and numberless other places of historical interest.

Growing impatient of the hard white sameness on the great routes of travel, we slipped out of them by the back roads, where we had the pleasure of meeting the French peasant under his own vines and wither into raisins. With mee bread in abundance, lamb outlets, and stewed haricol occasionally, we found the plain country fare entirely satisfactory.

The scenery was delightful. The season, the very best we could have chosen. One evening, a little after sunset, we arrived at the Value of Pagasagawar, a small onsis the Valley of Roquefavour, a small oasis of verdure among mountains of limestone. The wooded summits tower above this little glen where we put up for the night.

Near by is the great stone aqueduct which conveys water to the city of Marseilles. It is a stupendous work of art. It extends across from the summit on one side to the summit on the other, built up in three tiers of arches from the bottom of the valley. We clambered up the side of the mountain and crept out to the middle arch of the first tier. Though it was a arch of the first tier. Though it was a bright moonlight, and the walls twenty-five or thirty feet thick, we could not stand upright and look up to the arch above without dizziness. The vastness of the span seemed to be blended with that of the sky itself, and below was the bed of the river.

The next morning we turned from the highway into a gorge of the mountains, to find the abode of a hermit said to live somewhere there. Expecting to see "A recess in some rude rock,

"A recess in some rude rock, Book, beads and maple dish his meagre stock," we were surprised to find a place well appointed, well kept, and very comfortable. The rocks are piled up in horizontal strata to a great height, on each side of a wedgeshaped crevice opening outwards to the road. The lower part is closed up with a high concrete wall, and the interior space of about a couple of acres graded in parallel terraces to retain the soil. Thus the thrifty hermit obtains a fine garden plot, sheltered from all winds, well watered, and shut out from the world.

We approached the portal and pulled a handle, to which a bell responded up among the rocks, and presently a cowled head appeared, and we were welcomed to the hospitalities of the place. A long grapery extended over the entrance path, which skirts the base of the perpendicular cliff. The shelves of the surrounding rocks support picturesque masses of vines, figtree and shrubbery.

With the bright sun and genial soil of Provence, the old hermitage of "the chaunted hymn and solitary prayer," is as respectable as any "maison de campane." The hermit treated us very politicly, and took the pains to show us his dwelling, and his excavations along the face of the rocks for places of meditation, and also his kitchen garden.

He is a Spaniard by birth, and an ecclesiastic. We found him well informed and communicative. He appeared to regard our visit anything but an intrusion, rather as a favor rendered, especially as we were pilgrims from that far-off land of romance, America. We parted from the good man with great reluctance, and as we left he gave us a letter of introduction to an old friend of his, a nobleman who lives as a hermit in an ancestral chareau in another part of France.

"You may be passing that way," he said, "and like to call. You will find bim too a different kind of hermit from any you have ever read about."

On our winding way to the North of France we made a long detour to avail ourselves of so rare an opportunity for adventure. Having local guide-books and maps we found the place without much difficulty, and ascertained t all to enter.

We then perceived that the walls, so humble in appearance from the highway, were faced inside with smooth stone, and the gate lodge was an elegant Suisse affair. The rough walls seen from the road merely enclosed the old ditch or fosse, that surrounds a chateau. This latter we were to reach by a long avenue planted with apple trees, and so fuil of gravel stones and rubbish that we were in dread of some accident, when a peasant pointed out to us another alley smooth and shady, on which we rolled as comfortably as over a carpet to the entrance of the domain proper.

Here we were brought up all standing, by a narrow foot-bridge without railing, and underneath what looked like stagnant water covered thick with green moss. When we had reached the other side safely one of the servants was seen running down, back and forth, over this apparent hog, which proved to be a solid greensward ingeniously covered with aquatic plants.

They must have enjoyed our bewilderment. As we mounted the broad marble steps of the terrace, crowned with antique vases, we were more than surprised. The old turreted stone mansion, dating almost to the middle ages, the time-stained statuary, the mossy fountains and grottoes, the soft semi-tropical languor and Eden-like repose of centuries of high culture, were unlike anything we had ever seen. A stream of water meandered here and there, with ponds and artistic bridges, and massive trees casting deep shadows in the morning sun.

At that moment M. De la ———— appeared and soon made us feel quite at home. While chatting he drew out a snuff-box studded with diamonds and filled with dead spiders. He took one quietly and swallowed it, while directing our attention to some point in the landscape.

"Do you like bonbons," he said to me—"they are slightly acid and very refreshing to the mouth of a morning."

And he ate another spider. I took one myself, and found it a very pleasant confection. Then we explored the park, which was very fine. On a sudden I jumped aside, being near stepping into a machine labelled "wolf-trap." At that instant M. de la — turned round to fasten his shoe lacings, and was about to sit down on the fearful thing.

"Take care!" I said, springing towards him.

"Oh! be not alarmed!" he replied, touching a spring, when the trap was converted into a comfortable settee.

He is an original, I thought, as I walked on laughing to myself, resolved to be no more astonished at anything. By this time we were at some distance from the chateau and entered a cluster of dark cypress trees, with a tomb of white marble bearing the inscription inscription-inscription—

"Here reposes what I love best of all the world."

Supposing it to be a grave we retraced our steps with solemnity, suited to the occasion and the surroundings.

"If agreeable," said Monsieur, "we will rest here."

But could we not select some less mournful spot?

"If agreeable," said Monsieur, "we will rest here."

But could we not select some less mournful spot?

"It is time," replied the hermit, "to give you some refreshments."

I pointed to the monument.

"Precisely," he answered.

He then introduced a little key into the corner of the monument, when a marble slab opened and displayed a cold turkey, a ham, venison pie, and some dessert. As soon as he had opened this sideboard Monsieur uttered a most horrible shriek. I thought he had broken his arm.

"This is my way," said he, "of calling my servants."

Two valets appeared and set the table, applying a faucet to the lachrymary urn, whence flowed excellent country wine.

The lunch being over we inspected other parts of the grounds, and the numerous apartments of the chateau, where the eccentricity of the owner was exhibited in various ways. We remained till dinner, or rather supper, was announced. We touched not a dish without distrust. Yet Monsieur did the honors with his wonted courtesy and serenity. Dessert came and we breathed more freely, taking that opportunity to compliment our host upon the charming reception he had given us. He replied with good taste and much tact.

One praised above all the ingenious tricks which we had so much admired, when M. de la —— assumed a look of the most innocent astonishment. "I mean to say that you have found all sorts of ingenious ways of amusing yourself."

"I know not," replied the old seigneur, "whether I amuse myself much. I have shut myself up here where I am master and do as I please. I indulge my whims, and adhere to old habits which we have shut myself up here where I am master and do as I please. I indulge my whims, and adhere to old habits which we have shut myself up here where I am master and do as I please. I indulge my whims, and adhere to old habits which we have shut myself up here where I am master and do as I please. I indulge my whims, and adhere to old habits which we have shut myself up here where I am master and do as I please. I indulge my whims, and adhere many years. I have a son who is married and lives in Paris.

many years. I have a son who is married and lives in Paris.

"You think thonesome? Far from it. I have seen the world and live upon memories. My library, the periodicals of the day, and the care of my estate, with all these people to look after, furnish me with enough. The twenty-four hours are hardly sufficient for my daily routine. I seldom see any strangers, and your visit is a very agreeable episode. If you or your friends ever come this way again, be sure and give me a call."

Our responses and adieux were as gracious as our limited acquaintance with Parisian Freuch would permit, and on the whole we think and trust that we left a good impression, and behaved ourselves not unseemly, or as mawais sujets.

We refrain from violating hospitality by giving the precise address and location of either of our hermit bosts.

The audacity of some American wheelmen abroad is embarrassing. Flying over the country, in "all the madness of superfluous health," they are ready for a lark,—to interview a Grand Duke, or pull the beard of a Roman Senator.

At the last annual meet here in Boston, an incident occurred under our own observation which, if it had happened in some parts of Europe, might have called in the services of the American consul. We happened to be in line on the way to Lynn. The leader, to most of us personally unknown, turned off suddenly into a grand private entrance road, and rolled up to the front steps of a stately mansion. We all followed, supposing it to be something arranged beforehand. He dismounted, stood on the steps, and welcomed us gracefully to the freedom of the place he had just bought. "Make yourself at home, boys!" he shouted.

"I know you bought the place," said one, "but I didn't know you had moved in yet."

With that came three rousing cheers, and we all re-mounted and left as quickly as we

WHO SHALL BE MAYOR?

It is generally conceded that the candidates for Mayor in the coming election will be His Honor, Mayor Kimball, and Alder-man Samuel L. Powers. No partisan issue man Samuel L. Powers. No partisan issue is involved, as both are Republicans of such standing that they served on important committees in the state election. It is to be merely a question of men, and on such an issue the friends of Mayor Kimball have certainly no reason to fear defeat. He has held the office for three years, and during that time has given the most of his time to looking faithfully and honestly after the affairs of the city. the slightest fault is found with his administration. His experience in city affairs is probably greater than that of any other citizen, and that experience will be of special value to the city the coming year. He has been so long a resident of Newton, that he has a deep interest in the prosperity of the city, and everything which affects it. He does not seek the office, and would willingly make way for a better candidate. if one should be brought forward, but there seems no good reason why Newton should not take advantage of his experience, and retain him in office, as Providence did Mayor Doyle, who made that city one of the best governed cities in New England

Mayor Kimball also has no special politi-Mayor Kimball also has no special politi-cal ambition, and does not desire to use the position of mayor as a stepping stone to political preferment. The position is too honorable and important a one to be used for such a purpose, and it ought not to be made a mere political office. We do not need a politician in the Mayor's chair, but we do need a man who has the time and the disposition to perform his duties.

and the disposition to perform his duties. If young and ambitious men are desirous of political preferment, the way to get itis to go before the people in state or national politics, on some of the leading issues of the day, and show what stuff they are made of. Then if they are worthy of promotion they will get it. The office of the mayor of Newton ought not to be made merely a gilded badge for politicians to strive after.

take higher ground in nominating a mayor, than that taken by some politial conven-tions, which give their honors to the men who have sought them most persistently. "The office should seek the man, and not the man the office." may be old fashioned doctrine, but it explains the cause that has brought about many Republican defeats in state and national campaigns.

The closing paragraph is an important one, and deserves to be generally known. It reads as follows: The Institution depends largely for its support upon voluntary contributions, and, especially upon the origings of "Hospital Sunday." On the appointed day, in 1885, or at other times, twenty-three churches, of all denominations, gave $1048, which has been used in supporting, entirely or in part, all but four of the patients thus far cared for. in supporting, entirely or in part, all but four of the patients thus far cared for. Newton, is the numbering of houses. The present plan does well enough for a country village, where every one knows everyone else, but in a city the size of Newton it is a great inconvenience. Strangers who come here to call on a resident, find that their friends live somewhere on a certain street, and have to call usually at a half dozen houses before finding the right one. A gentleman was telling of his adventure the other day, in one of the most thickly settled wards of the city. The person of whom he was in search was put down in the directory as living near the corner of a certain street. After going over the ground twice, and ringing at half a dozen doors. twice, and ringing at half a dozen doors, he found the house he sought was nearly a mile from the corner mentioned. This is only one out of a hundred cases that might only one out of a hundred cases that might be mentioned, and which show the necessity of having the houses numbered. The matter came up incidentally in the board of Aldermen, Monday night, on the petition of a Newton Centre gentleman to have his houses numbered. Alderman Nickerson attack that the case of stated that a man was ready to proceed systematically with the work of numbering the houses in the city, if he were granted the requisite permission, without expense to the city, as he would look to the residents to be benefitted for his pay. The city ought to take immediate advantage of such an offer.

THE WALTHAM FREE PRESS and the Record are both rather sensitive to the charge that Waltham delegates, after dictating a candidate in the Republican Sena torial convention, failed to do anything to wards electing Mr. Fletcher, The Free Press pleads that the population of Waltham is "far more subject to outside influences than that of Newton," whatever that may mean, and adds: "We could tell some bad stories about Newton Republicans and their work against Mr. Eletcher in Waltham their work against Mr. Fletcher in Waltham if we were so disposed." It the Free Press really knows any bad stories it ought to tell them at once, and relieve its mind. Newton people are interested in this mat-ter, and would like to know to what the Free Press alludes.

Dr. M'Cosh has got a good deal of free advertising out of the Harvard celebration advertising out of the Harvard celebration, and perhaps that was what the shrew old Scotchman was after, but it is not a kind of advertising that most sensible men would care about. There was nothing in Dr. Holmes's poem to rouse an dinary man's wrath, and his complaint that Princeton professors were slighted in the conferring of degrees reminds one of a child's party where one of the guests gets mad and won't play, because some one else got a bigger slice of cake.

The critics seem to be as much a variance in regard to Mrs. Langtry as they are concerning Mary Anderson. Readers in search of information are told that she has made an immense improvement since her last appearance here, that she has not improved at all, that she is the personification of grace and beauty, that she is stiff, awkward, and not remarkable for good looks, and so on. Nevertheless the Jersey Lily has large and enthusiastic audiences wherever she appears, and that is the es

THE death of Ex-President Arthur will cause sorrow throughout the land. He became President at a trying time, but he so conducted himself that he won the affec-tion and respect of the people. Had he been nominated, as a large portion of the Republican party desired, Mr. Cleveland would never have been President.

as the ward is a close one politically, the result is in some doubt. In Ward Six, Alderman Mason absolutely refuses to serve another term. He has been a member of the City government for five years, and has been a faithful, intelligent, and useful member. It will be hard to fill his place. Councilmen Ross and Edmands will also decline to serve again, it is said, so that this ward will have to get up an entire new ticket. In Ward Seven, Messrs Warren P. Tyler,

W. H. Brackett, and Councilman French are all spoken of as candidates for the oftice of alderman, and for the council, Mr. Kennedy will be renominated. A citizen ticket composed of W. J. Follett and J. C

—The approaching anniversary service of the N. Y. M. C. A., which is to be held in Eliot Hall, Sunday after next, promises to be very interesting. Besides the address of a distinguished layman, Miss Gertrude Swayne, one of Boston's most delightful sopranos, has kindly consented to be present and sing.

—The article in the Boston Sunday Her-ald of last week, on Boston's Mail Service, was a most truthful bit of advice and sug-gestion, carrying with it much that those outside of the service know nothing of; it well worth perusing and profiting by —At a large teachers' meeting of the Eliot Sunday School held Tuesday evening, Mr. D. O. Bourdon was selected to be superintendent of the Infant Department, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Geo. S. Trowbridge. Some kind hands have thoughtfully hung a half life-size portrait of Mr. Trowbridge in the room where he labored so successfully.

—Mr. Horace E. Walker of the Walker & Pratt Manufacturing Company, died suddenly on Thursday in Watertown. He was about 54 years of age. He resided on Otis street in this village until about two years ago, when the death of his wife was such a shock to him that he sold his house and removed to Watertown. He leaves a son and daughter.

on and daughter.

—The Rev. R. A. White's opening lecture on "Victoria of England," last Sunday evening, was a most interesting discourse, giving as it did the pedigree of England's Queen, her childhood, young womanhood, touching upon her happy married life, and giving the outline of her strong and womanly character. Next Sunday evening he continues by giving the principal events of her reign, wherein lies her real power, ctc., taking her as the Sovereign.

—The program of the Universalist Sociable of last week was remarkably entertaining, and mirth provoking. A character reading by Mr. Atwood was excellent. Songs by Mrs. Noyes, Mrs. Atwood, and Mrs. Sherwood were good, and the impromptu charades in which Mrs. Dearborn and Mr. Bradshaw appeared, were inimitable and irresistible, and were the source of much merriment and hilarity. Messrs.

Chaloner and Dearborn, too, were excellent in their parts.

-Rev. Mr. Titus preached an excellent sermon last Sunday morning an excellent Honesty." which was full of practical truths. He said that in these days people were too apt to forget what was the foundation of all morality even before the days of Christianity. It was the essential part of a good character, and its importance, even in the smallest things, could not be too strongly insisted upon.

too strongly insisted upon.

—Mr. Edward P. Cail, of the Boston Herald, lectured last week Thursday evening at the church of the New Jerusalem, in Providence, on "Journalism of To-day; How and By Whom Newspapers Are Made." He spoke with particular favor of Sunday newspapers, and said that the tendency of American journalism is upward. If the improvement of the next twenty-five years be as great as that of the past twenty-five years, he said, there will be but little further to desire in the journalism of that time.

—Mr. John Binney of Ods street died at his residence Tuesday night after a brief illness of pneumonia. Mr. Binney was 72 years old and was among the first settlers of the village. He was also well known to Boston business men, having for many years been in business on Atlantic avenue, the firm name being John Binney & Son. Mr. Binney leaves a wife and son and a large circle of friends, by whom he was greatly esteemed. The funeral services were held this (Friday) afternoon, at his late residence. late residence

—The Public Goddard will take place next Tuesday evening, Nov. 23, in the Universalist Vestry, at 8 o'clock. —The Congregational Fair which opened The Public Goddard will take place

Bissell. The admission will be 10 cents, and a full house is expected.

—The Congregational Fair which opened Tuesday afternoon, continuing Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings, was a great success. The society have never had a more attractive sale. The supper was a most generous one for 25 cts, and the gentlemen's table was one of the greatest attractions, especially in the evening when presided over by the gentlemen in their costumes of striped trousers, old gold conts, (swallow tailed), and the high collars which gave them a most stiff-necked, if not to say dignified appearance, notwithstanding the frolic and merriment that held high carnival in their midst.

—Miss Beecher's lecture on the "Conundrum of the Hour," was but thinly attended on Monday evening, yet the few listeners heard much that was profitable and inspiring, and the plain unvarnished truth was spoken with no respect to personal peculiarities. Miss Beecher is a ready and most interesting speaker, her language is choice, and her reasoning logical. The question or subject upon which her lecture was laid, was "what is woman's position," "where does she belong," After sarcastically referring to the self appointed champions, the men, who propose to put woman into, or assign to her, her proper place, she concluded by saying that woman's place was wherever she could be of use, and that God only, and her opportunities and ability, could limit the range of her activity, or assign to her any one sphere. The lecture was excellent in every respect, and well worth digesting and hearing again.

—Willie, the other of the two poor suffering boys of Mr. Fiske, has at last found rest. The case of these two, who for so long had lain side, by side companions in suffering, was almost unparalleled, and the cheerfulness and fortitude with which it was borne equally rare. Powers will give his impersonation of "David Garrick."

—Lawrence Malayachlin died suddenly.

— Lawrence McLanghlin died suddenly of Heart disease Tuesday morning at his home on River street. He had lived in Newton and Watertown for the past thirty years, and has been in many kinds of business. He was once in the law business, although he was never admitted to the bar. Last summer he was convicted in the police court of illegal liquor selling, and sentenced to the House of Correction for three months. He appealed, and the case was to have been tried on Wednesday. The case lad worried him greatly, and he had said that if he was sentenced to the House of Correction it would kill him. He leaves a wife and five grown up children, and was about 60 years of age.

He leaves a wife and five grown up children, and was about 60 years of age.

—The Women's Educational Club, which met Friday, Nov. 12, was an unusually full one, owing, doubtless, to the expectation of meeting the Malden club, some ten in number, who gave very enjoyable contributions of readings. The first was from Mrs. Baxter, on the Zuni Indians. Following this was one by Mrs. Shatuck, subject. "Anna Ella Carroll," giving an interesting account of her scheme in the civil war, of the march of our army to Corinth, which was that of going up the Tennessee rather than down the Mississippi, attacking the enemy in the rear, which led to one of our greatest victories. Stanton was put in the Cabinet in the place of Cameron, who was too old to serve, to accomplish this end. She is at present an invalid, without means of support, and her claims for a pension for this valuable service has been long before Congress, but so far without recognition. Mrs. Pease gave an account of a charming outing to Middlesox Fells. The lesson she wished to impress was that the love and study of Nature is a great solace to the care-worn and sorrowing of earth. "The Clown's Baby" and the story of "Mat's Lazy Wife," were very entertaining. The president of their association was then introduced, who gave a little account of the workings of their club, which is small in number, noticing particularly their "group of letter-writers," which has accomplished so much in the way of self-improvement. Mrs. Bucklin of Providence will read a paper on "Marie Antoinette" at the next fortnightly meeting.

from China is expected to be present and to address the society.

—Rev. Mr. Newhall preached on Sunday morning from the text, "Give, and it shall be given unto you." The world says, "get," and God says, "give," But giving and getting must go together; when a man ceases to give, he ceases to get. Our Lord went by the treasury and saw a poor widow casting in two mites, and straightway he lifted that woman and her two mites, so that all the world could see, and learn the lesson that everyone can give something. It is an old and forgotten truth that Christian men are the stewards of God's bounty. If the heart be right, it will determine how much it is right to give and for what. The music was a sentence, "Grant, we beseech thee," Gloria in Excelsis by Louis, and response by Barnby. In the evening the sermon was on the relation of the State to the Sabbath. The music was an anthem by Stainer, "What are these," and a duet for tenor and bass from St. Paul, "Now we are ambassadors," and a setting of "Abide with me," by Sir John Goss.

"Now we are ambassadors," and a setting of "Abide with me," by Sir John Goss.

—The Congregational Sunday School Concert on Sunday evening. Texts bearing on the subject were repeated by the children, and they sang from a book of original and selected Temperance songs, prepared for Juvenile Societies by Miss Anna Gordon, a former resident, who is now engaged with Miss Willard in the National Temperance Work. Mrs. Rice of Boston, State Superintendent of Sunday Schools and Juvenile work, addressed the children; she gave a talk to the little ones, which evidently greatly interested them, and as well was adapted to interest and profit the older hearers. She spoke of the body as the house of the soul, having doors and windows, and furnishings within that needed guarding; showing the children how they could at least keep all harmful things from entering by the door of the mouth; she urged them to keep out all forms of alcohol and tobacco, as calculated to make havoc with furnishings, and ruin the house and its immate. Sunday afternoon Mrs. Rice met the Sunday School teachers and talked to them of temperance work in Sunday School, advocating a Temperance Sunday School Concert at least once a year, a quarterly Sunday School lesson and the pledging of classes, urging that the teachers take the triple pledge against profanity, alcohol and tobacco, and then offer it to their pupils.

WHO'LL BUY?

My neighbor wears a cotton dress:— She comes with marigold and cress All dripping, coiled together. The willow basket in her hand Is bright with water and with sand, This happy, hap't weather! —They grew beside an April stream, Beneath an April sky!

Again I meet her, flushed and brown,
With braid and bonnet slipping down;
She looks upon me gaily.
She knows the grassy upland farm
Where berries ripen high and warm,
And redden deeper daily!
—She found them in the summer fields,
Beneath a summer sky!

To-day she enters at my gate;
She steps inside the sill to wait;
And so once more I find her.
Alack! the whirling leaves are brown,—
And he who shook the chestnuts down
Is standing there beside her!
"Who'll buy?" Who would not buy?
—They found them in the autumn woods,
Beneath a froety sky!

BY FRANCES C. SPARHAWK.

Claire Manoir's light feet sped toward her home with her Aunt Nanon, in a respectable street in Marseilles. More than once she looked with a smile at the napoleon in her hand. How easily she had arned it. The posing wearied her, to be sure, but M. Joyneure had been very kind, and he had paid her handsomely. Now she could be married in a dress of the stuff that Emile had admired. It cost more money than she could have spared from the silvence for her simple outfit. the allowance for her simple outfit. How pleased her bridegroom would be to see her in it; he should not know of it until Old Rosalie, who had her room in the same house with Claire, came along at the moment. She caught the smile, and then perceived that a coin was in the girl's hand. "Ah!" she said, "it pays to go to the monsieur's studio, Claire."

"Yes, indeed, Madame Rosalie," the girl answered, "and only see how well I am paid just for doing nothing."

"Is it two months since you have been going there so often?"

"Oh, no, madame, scarcely one. M. Joyneure is so very industrious."
"Ah!" said Rosalie. "And what says

Emile Beausan?"

The tone made the young girl turn her beautiful eyes upon her questioner's face, and at what she read there the blood mounted to herforehead. "I have not told him yet." she answered proudly, "it is to be something of a surprise to him."

'No doubt it will be," answered Rosalie dryly. "Good-day to you, Claire." And she passed on up the streeet, muttering, "I will tell him.'

What was it that the old woman was see ing, as in a few minutes she changed her course and went on hurridly toward the course and went on hurridly toward the building upon which Beausan was at work? It was Claire Manoir still, not as she had just seen her, but as she had come home from last summer's festival, loaded with flowers, and proclaimed by vote the prettiest girl at the fete, she, Claire, with her blue eyes and pale hair, and her skin, "too white, a great deal," muttered the old woman. And where, on that summer day, had been Louise, the daughter of Rosalie's only son; Louise, with her shining black eyes and hair, and the touch ocolor in her cheeks—color as rich as the hue of a Jacqueminot rose? Louise had been slighted. In Rosalie's eyes this was the supreme offence. Claire had been the cause of it. And now Claire—althow confused she had been when asked if Beausan knew. "It looked evil, certainly. At any rate—" ran the woman's thoughts.

The young carpenter came forward with a troubled face.
"Is Claire ill, Madame Rosalie?" he cried, is any thing the matter?"
"You may not think so, Emile," she answered.

The summer went by and the autumn. Winter was at hand. It mattered little to Claire Manoir what the weather was, her winter had set in that May day on which Emile Beausan had declared his distrust of her, and Claire had proudly given him back his freedom. He had trusted Rosalie rather than her.

He had left Marseilles. Claire did not know where he was. She prayed only that he might be happy, that his wife would be a beautiful young girl who would love him as well as she herself. Nobody could do it better.

he might be happy, that his wife would be a beautiful young giri who would love him as well as she herself. Nobody could do it better.

Emile Beausan was at work upon a church in a little village among the Auvergne Mountains. Telegraph and railway were unknown there. He was glad to be shit out from the world. He thought sometimes that life had grown too bitter for endurance. Even his work, which from his pride in it and his activity, had always been a pleasure to him, had come to drag. He threw himself into it, however, like a man who stakes his all, and would not confess to himself that his old ambition had gone. Yet it seemed strange to him that up here where he had believed that all the past would be behind him, it was meeting him in a form that was making him wild. More than once when he saw Clement Joyneure with his companion, an older artist, stroll by, each with his easel and pictures, he would clutch his hammer hard and strike desperately upon the nail that he was driving—the blows which he longed to hurl at the unconscious face of the artist.

But he had no procfs,—no proofs. After all, what were old Rosalie's suspicious that from his pride in it and his activity, had always been a pleasure to him, had come to drag. He threw himself into it, however, like a man who stakes his all, and would not confess to himself that his old ambition had gone. Yet it seemed strange to him that up here where he had believed that all the past would be behind him, it was meeting him in a form that was making him wild. More than once when he saw Ciement Joyneure with his companion, an older artist, stroll by, each with his easel and pictures, he would clutch his hammer hard and strike desperately upon the nail that he was driving—the blows which he longed to hurl at the unconscious face of the artist.

But he had no proofs,—no proofs. After all, what were old Rosalie's suspicions that they should cost one man his happiness, and another his life?

But this thought only arrested him for the moment, it gave him no comfort, for it would not stay; and the more he saw of Clement Joyneure's grace and beauty, the more fully he believed Rosalie. What woman, with a choice between the artist and himself could hesitate? He put off the doom of Joyneure, but only until he might find him alone.

Yethe did not mean to strike down his rival at unawares, but to compel him to defend himself, and kill him in fair fight, with a carpenter. The disgrace to the artist only made this combat the more desired by the other.

A week after their arrival, and, if Beausan had known it, the day before their departure, the artists, with sketches on easels and colored tubes lying about, were stretched upon the ground resting, enjoying what might prove the last warm day of the season, and engaged in that delightful occupation of criticising each others work. It was Beausan's nooning. He crept toward the two. It was in vain to try to find Joyneure alone. Beausan knew that it was madness to attack two men, one of whom had never injured him. But his loss of Claire was distracting him. His heart was on fire for blood. Whether it was his own, too, he did not care, so long as it was Joyneure's. As he crept toward them he overheard the talk. "It like your Andromache," said the elder artist.

"I like your Andromache," said the elder artist.

"Its pretty good," admitted Joyneure with a laugh. "But I don't think anything else of mine equal to Elaine." Then followed an exchange of views upon technical points, of which Emile did not comprehend a word. "To me," Joyneure went on, "the strength of this picture lies in the fact that I had a model that conveyed the idea of the purity and sweetness of Elaine best of anyone I ever saw. I almost fell in leve with the girl, an exquisite little thing. She was going to be married in a few weeks, to some boor of course, who would have been just as well content with any common mortal. Perhaps she spent what I paid her upon a gift for her bridegroom. Pshaw! the idea annoys me." Beausan breathed hard. "I couldn't help referring to him once or twice, just to see the beautiful color come into her face," continued the speaker.

ful color come into her tace, "continued the speaker.

His companion laughed.
"So you didn't succeed in cutting him out," he said.
"Seriously" answered Clement, "if I had made the least attempt, I should have lost my model on the instant. You don't have to try everything to know that some things won't work.

Emile was trembling.
"Who is your paragon, Joyneure?"
"A little girl in Marseilles. Her first name is Claire. I don't remember the last, except that it began with 'M.' But what matter? That has been changed."
With white face and reeling step, Emile Beausan passed down the slope again, out of the village and on the shortest road to Marseilles.

plague was spreading last. At city was safe,—no person.

At Marseilles he met a friend, of whom he begged the news.

Here the cholera was raging. Emile had learned this. Old Rosalie had been among its first victims,

"And Nanon," he asked tremulously.

She had fled at once. He breathed.

"Then they are all safe, they and Claire," he said, he said.

"Claire? No, she did not flee. For then old Rosalie would not have had a human being to nurse her. Louise would not come. Claire took care of her until she died." "And he added that now the girl herself was stricken down.

"How long since?" gasped Emile.

"Yesterday." When the speaker was about to add that it was a bad case. Emile had gone.

treatment of their enemies would have been enough. What had be been about to do? And what had Claire done? Which deed showed the innocent heart? He knelt beside the young girl in her de-lirium. Would she be able to give him one word of forgiveness before she died?

The doctor said that was it Claire's youth and simple life, and Beausan's nursing that saved her; Emile was sure that it was the joy; Claire was silent about it, but she said her prayers with a more loving heart then ever

Newton and the Boston & Albany.

"Franklin" writes to the Saturday Evening Gazette in regard to the purchase of the Harkins estate in Ward 2, by the Boston & Albany corporation, at a good round sum, and says: This of itself is an unimportant and insignificant fact in connection with the mammoth operations of such a corporation as the Boston & Albany. Still, it recalls to mind some discussions in the old board of directors of the Boston & Worcester Railroad and the old ancedote of P. P. F. Degrand, which has been repeated several times, but which I will record at this time, though I risk a laugh from my old-time friend, Bigelow Coffin, who, by the way, if his modesty did not interfere, could discount me any day so far as reminiscences of Old Boston are concerned. When the Boston & Worcester corporation was first chartered the opposition was intense. The principal towns, such as watertown, Waitham, Weston, and so on, bitterly objected to the rail route being laid alongside the old stage route and through their centres.

A southerly line was then decided upon, which avoided all these centres, and the present route through Newton was fixed. Through the far-sightedness of the Hon. William Jackson, then the principal resident of Newton, the right of way was granted through the town and largely through Needham and Natick as far as Framingham.

Land then—say, from Winship's Gardens in Brighton to South Framingham—had ing Gazette in regard to the purchase of the Harkins estate in Ward 2, by the Bos

Williams and Eliphalet Williams were in favor of the purchase. Nathan Hale, the president, his associates on the board, and the engineers were opposed. What an item it would be in the history of the old Boston & Worcester and in that of the consolidation of 1809, to parade the prices paid for these very lands.

But the Boston real estate, though the largest item in the account, is not the only one as showing the want of foresight in the corporators.

Even thirty years ago there was but one man on the board of directors of the Boston & Worcester Railroad who could see what would be needed in towns along the line, and that was the Hon. Ginery Twichell, the president; and now in the city of Newton alone the present corporation has been obliged to more than quadruple its yard facilities for the reception and delivery of merchandise, while it is scrimped at every point for decent passenger accommodation.

The energy and vitality of this great corporation is, however, visible in the way which it is every day grasping these problems of accommodation, and still there is a vast amount of land adjacent to the property of the corporation which the corporation must have within the next decade, property which to-day can be bought for a song, but which ten years hence will measure its surface value by dollars per foot.

A gentleman received a note from his lawyer which he was unable to decipher. On his way to his office he met a friend at the door of a drug store. The friend, after vainly attempting to read the note, suggested that they step inside and hand it to the druggist, without comment. The druggist, after studying it in silence for a few minutes, stepped behind the prescription case, and in a short time returned with a bottle of medicine, duly labelled and bearing directions. When the gentleman saw his lawyer he was informed that the note was a notice for him to call at his office between 3 and 4 o'clock p. m. of the following day. #### IN AID OF THE INDIANS.

BY JOHN C. PARK. The meeting in behalf of the Western Indians which was held at the Eliot church on the 10th, under the auspices of the "Newton Indian Association," was attended by a large and appreciative audience. Had the people of Newton been aware of the excellent manner in which the subject would be presented, not a seat in that large anditorium would have been unoc-cupied.

Mr. Joshua W. Davis, president of the Newton Indian Association, presided, and after inviting Dr. Gould to invoke God's blessing on the cause (which he did most earnestly) Mr. Davis very expressively set forth the object of the meeting. He allud-ed to the fact that here where the Gospel was first preached to the Indians from the was first preached to the Indians from the Protestant point of view by the apostle Eliot, now in an edifice called after his name, it was most appropriate that we should meet to consider the wrongs which had/for two hundred years been perpetrated against that people, their need of civilization and religious instruction. He pictured graphically how the greed of white men had driven them from the eastern sealound step by step from their homes, their board step by step, from their homes, their hunting-grounds and cultivated fields, until a similar process from the western shore met the tide and pressed them into what were most singularly called, "Reserva-tions." There are in the United States 250,-000 Indians, and of these, 200,000 had never been reached by the Gospel. Have they not claims upon us quite equal to the toons." There are in the Ontectacts.

1000 Indians, and of these, 200,000 had never been reached by the Gospel. Have they not claims upon us quite equal to the residents of Asia or the far-off islands? They have an instinct of reverence and worship, and, not being bettr taught, how before every thing majestic which their senses perceive—the mountain, the cateract, the great rivers, the sun. This instinct needs our guidance.

The Indian Association of Newton is fully organized and is daily increasing in strength. Its objects are three fold. First, to influence Congress to give the tribes not only protection against further encroachments, but the right of access to our courts of law, and, as rapidly as possible, land in severalty and rights of citizenship. Second, by the establishment among them of missionary schools (many to be conduced by devoted women) to teach the arts of domestic life, where woman is a help-meet and not a drudge, respected and not degraded; and Third, for which this meeting is particularly called to consider and act, to disseminate religious knowledge and the principles of Christianity.

Rev. A. L. Riggs, principal of the Nor-Training School for Indian youths at Santee, Neb., was then introduced. He proved himself to be a gentleman of unusual powers of eloquence. His carnestness and zeal captivated his listeners, while he recounted the wrongs and the just claim of the people among whom he is laboring. How he and his colaborers had suffered for want of pecuniary aid to carry on the work, how successfully they had struggled, but must have further assistance. He brought tears into many eyes, and pain into many consciences as he described a seene in which one of their female mission aries sat in a tepee by the side of a dying Indian maiden, and told her about God and Jesus, and the joys of an hereafter; when the listening girl exclaimed, "How long have you white people known all this" "He would be a fair in the people whom they would teach and entiret and thurter in his tibe, but became a Christ our missionaries in their intercourse with the people whom they would teach and influence.

The quintette of Indian youth added much to the interest of the evening. They were clad in the dresses of civilization; no. Indian adornments, as many expected. Three modest, self-posessed maidens and two men; all with strongly marked Indian features. With a piano accompaniment they sang several of our well known hymns and one of their Indian chants, this last in the Indian language. The reverent, self-poised bearing of all of them gave pleasure to all, and sent many away with feelings of gratitude that so much was being done, and with a determination that more should be done.

Rev. Charles W. Shelton, financial secretary of the American Missionary Association, closed the meeting. He detailed briefly but clearly the necessity of the work; the financial embarrassments which it had encountered, and how much could be done if further funds could be procured. He thanked the friends for what they had already done, and assured them that their contributions had been indiciously expended. Cards were distributed, to be signed by any who desired to join the "Newton Indian Association," and pay one dollar annually to aid the work. Many were signed. Rev. Mr. Ehnamani uttered the benediction in the Dakota language.

This sketch of the meeting gives but a meagre and insufficient account of it; it should be added to the additional and the modellar annually to aid the work. Many were signed to the meeting gives but a meagre and insufficient account of it; it should be done in the Dakota language.

A Cork in the Mouth.

A Cork in the Mouth(Springheld Republican.)
All who heard Gov. Robinson's after-dinner speech at the Harvard celebration felt like congrathating themselves that the anniversary came before his term had expired.—[Newton Graphic.

The above represents a feeling that has found expression wherever little groups of men have talked over the great doings at Cambridge. There is no need to enlarge on the lesson that all sensible people see now just as clearly as they did before the republican state convention placed a cork in the mouths of republican partisans. If stripped of his wealth, and placed on his merits as an aspirant for the chief office in this state, no one will claim that Oliver Ames could by any possibility be to-day the governor-elect of Massachusetts. The voters are not yet so emancipated from the rusty chains of party that they will select the best candidate, irrespective of the label he bears; but the people are certainly more independent to-day than ever before. When this becomes a doubtful state, the politicians will be compelled to keep their standard high,—

Not failure, but low aim's a crime.

A London paper has overheard a conversation in third-class life of a mechanic's wife who had brought her husband's dinner to a public house adjoining his workshop:

"I say, Jack," observed the wife, perusing the newspaper, "I see that poor young kidnapped prince is going back to Sophia."

kidnapped prince is going back.

"Yes?" (with his mouth full). "I wish you'd put in more seasoning." (Pause.)

"Ah! it's hard, Jack, for a man to be torn away from his wife by a lot of seamps."

"Wife? Sophia's not his wife."

"Not his wife? Then the Czar has done quite right."

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair.

—The First Parish held a social gathering on Wednesday evening at the chapel. A bountiful supper was served at an early hour. During the evening there were recitations by Miss Jennie Packard of Newton Highlands, a young girl of unusual dramatic ability. A tableau of "Liberty Enlightening the World" was personated by tall man draped and powdered and bearing aloft a flaming torch, making a very fine tableau. A recitation was given by Master Woodworth, assisted by Mr. Sam'l Ward, in the dumb orator style. The inclemency of the weather did not prevent a good attendance and much sociability.

—It is found that in order to admit of a passage of the Baptist meeting house down Centre street to Pelham street, that three lamp posts must be taken down, also the new watering trough, and nine trees be laid over. —On Wednesday evening, by invitation of Mrs. Gardner Colby, the Baptist society held their November social gathering at her residence on Centre street. The day had been dark, with a genuine London November afternoon fog, and the evening preserved the same temper with only a light rainfall, which did not prevent a large attendance, filling the drawing-room and overflowing into the adjoining rooms. During the evening Miss Douglass sang several songs very sweetly, Miss Forbes accompanying with the piano. Miss Ellen M. Cook gave a fine reading on "Juvenile Human Nature." Mr. William J. Clowes, of the middle class, Theological Institution, read Lowell's "Sir Launfal;" after which Mr. A. C. Walworth invited the company to the dining-room. Among the guests were Rev. Dr. Lyman Jewett, late of the Telugee mission, Madras, and two daughters.

Dr. Lyman Jewett, late of the Teingee mission, Madras, and two daughters.

—We are glad to welcome the return of Capt. F. N. Brown to Newton, he having taken Mrs. G. W. Cole's house on Summer street. Mr. Brown will be remembered as a resident of Homer street in 1865, having come thither at the close of the war. During several years following he was a member of the Claffin Guards, and rose from the ranks by merit to the position of captain. In 1882 he was appointed drill master to the High School Battalion, but the following year, on account of illness in his family, he removed to California. Since his return he has been reappointed. Capt. Brown is an excellent tactician, and understands adapting the regular army and West Point Manual to the needs of the rank and file of the High School cadets. His experience and abilities make him a valuable addition to our High School corps of instructors.

—Mrs. Maria Upham Drake delivered her second lecture on "Physical Culture," and the relation of body, mind and spirit, Tuesday afternoon at the Bostom Young Women's Christian Association. This course of lectures is intended to give the fashionable mothers of the present day a careful and practical view of the special requisites of their children, in order that they may reach the age of maturity endowed with a healthy physique. The lecturer reviewed the history of the American people, and said that where a few years ago our forefathers were a quiet agricultural people, content with a meagre subsistence, today we are a trades-people fired with ambition and in eager pursuit of Mammon. This has its effect on the children of the race, and one might well say they had lost the sturdiness of the Anglo-Saxon and implanted the special characteristic of the American, viz., nervousness. The idea of the present generation is to simplify life, to the ruin of future generations. The lecturer exhorted mothers to give their girls a course in the principles of anatomy, physiology, hygiene and surgery, that they may know enough to care for their own bodies, instead of teaching them to paint a placque or spend hours over a piano. The nation depends on the family and each individual thereof. Women must be the conservative element of the home and not the radical. She exhorted mothers, instead of interviewing the mind cures, to take up the works of the scientists, and read for themselves the principles of disease and how to uproot it.

Hospital Contributions.

To the Editor of the Graphic: I have before me a copy of a weekly periodical, published in London, Eng., entitled "The Hospital." It is devoted to the interests of all institutions for the care of the sick, and seems to be an interesting and useful journal.

the sick, and seems to be an interesting and useful journal.

There is an article on "The Hospital Problem" by The Right Hon., the Earl of Derby, who has been for many years president of the Hospital for Consumptives at Brompton. A paragraph from this article is as follows:

"That leads me to notice what I have often mentioned before, the comparatively small number of people by whom medical charities and, indeed, all charities are supported. You will find a few who give even above their means, and many who give more or less liberally; but you will also find in every town that I know anything of, that a very large proportion of the well-to-do, altogether or almost wholly evade their duty in this respect. That is an evil in many ways, and it tends to grow, because nobody likes to think that he is doing more than his duty only in order that somebody else may do less."

In another article in the same paper on the theme that the burden of work always falls on the "willing horse," the writer says, "It is the duty of every man who can spare a shilling annually (and who can not?) to spare it for these most noble and most useful institutions. If every man gave the smallest tithe, even of his superfluities, the hospitals would be rich."

Next Sunday being "Hospital Sunday," it may be useful to consider these observations of men who have made Hospitals and the question of their support a study for many years.

Sunday schools in Europe.

—The Y. M. C. A. gospel meeting last Sunday afternoon at Eliot lower hall was one of the largest of the season. Vice-pres. Chas. A. Haskell led, speaking upon Thanksgiving. Some 25 persons also spoke, while interesting singing was interspersed throughout. These meetings are now in charge of Mr. Haskell, who has been appointed chairman of the devotional committee, and interesting speakers and services will be the order every Sunday afternoon in the future. No contribution boxes are passed, and all are invited, especially young men, who will find these services interesting and profitable.

—The last Friday evening meeting at Eliot Church vestry was the scene of a pleasant surprise to Rev. Dr. Calkins, on his return from his six months' journey. The prayer meeting was one of the fullest he has had since his settlement in Newton, and after an interesting address upon some of his impressions of the spiritual condition of Germany and France, the gentlemen immediately conveyed the chairs to the sides of the room and threw open the folding doors, exposing a table laden with a simple repast of cake and chocolate, and there ensued a very social and happy interchange of congratulation and good fellowship between pastor and people and with each other. It was a happy occasion.

—The Newton Y. M. C. A. Anniversary, which occurs next Sunday at 3 p. m. in Eliot (large) Hall, will be addressed by that successful business man and eloquent speaker, Mr. H. M. Moore of Boston, upon a subject pertinent to this occasion. The singing of Miss Gertrude Swayne, of some of the sweet gospel melodies, ought alone to fill the hall with an appreciative audience. There will be the usual reports and addresses by the retiring and incoming presidents. A live praise service will precede the regular exercises, under a skilful leader, aided by a cornet. Carry Gospel Hymns 1, 2, 3 and 4 combined. An exceedingly interesting service is promised.

—The Boston Traveller Saturday evening surprised its Newton readers by publishing a portrait of Rev. Dr. Calkins, and giving a two column account of Eliot Church and its history. The church was organized in 1845, the leaders being Messrs. William and Timothy Jackson, Otis Trowbridge, Joseph Bacon, Joseph N. Bacon, Joseph W. Goddard and Joshua Jennison. It was known as the First or Angier's Corner Religious Society, and the church building was located on the corner of Centre and Church streets. The original members were 37, and Rev. Dr. Edward N. Kirk dedicated the new building. It has had five pastors. The old house of worship became too small and it was moved away, and in 1861 the present church was dedicated. But eight of the original members of the church are living, and the total membership is now about 525. The other details given are mainly from the annual statistics published by the church, and the article closes with a brief biography of the present pastor, and a reference to his six months' visit to Europe.

—Timothy Murray of Watertown fell from a load of stones Tuesday afternoon on Pearl street, and the wheel of the heavy wagon passed over his leg, crushing it in a terrible manner. He was attended by Dr. O'Donnell and taken to the Cottage Hospital.

—The first sociable given by Waban Lodge, I. O. O. F., came off at their hall Monday evening, and was a very pleasant affair. Fifty couples were present. Gardner's orchestra furnished music, and Mr. Frank B, Barnes prompted. Reed of Boston was the caterer, and the success of the series was rendered certain.

—The High School boys had a hare and hounds run Thanksgiving day morning. Messrs. Potter of '87 and Smith of '88 were the hares, and were given four minutes start. A dozen or more hounds followed, and the run took in Newton Highlands, Upper Falls, Waban, Woodland and Auburndale. The hares proved too fleet for their pursuers, and came in 10 minutes ahead. The course covered about 10 miles.

ahead. The course covered about 10 miles.

—Judge Park gave a very interesting talk to the boys at the Bigelow School Wednesday morning. He took for his subject the way boys had to struggle for an education fifty and a hundred years ago, and told how his father when a boy had to walk three miles to school, and instead of having books furnished him, he had to work and earn them. The boys were very much interested in the description of a school boy's life so different from anything in their experience.

—Rev. Mr. Nichols' sermon last Sunday evening was listened to by a large audience, drawn no doubt to hear how he would treat his subject, "Amusements," and while all were pleased, even if they did not all agree with his positions, they were surprised as well by the manner in which he treated a subject so surrounded with difficulties. While Mr. Nichols' views are pronounced, yet his style of thought and manner of presenting them are unlike the usual manner, and thus are especially interesting. It was noticed that many, both of his own and other congregations, lingered to thank and congratulate him at the close of his sermon.

—About 2 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. E. P. Eurnham discovered flames in Mr. Welcome Beal's stable on Boyd street, and he hastened from his house to give the alarm. The firemen found the flames well under way when they arrived, and the most they could do was to save the adjoining house, the ell part of which was badly scorched by the flames. The barn and its contents, including two horses, a valuable English pointer dog, express wagon, pungharnesses and a quantity of hay, were burned. Mr. Beal had an insurance of $600 on the contents, which will about cover the actual loss. The stable was owned by James Maher, and was valued at $500. It was insured. No cause is known for the fire, and it is thought to have been the work of an incendiary.

—At the meeting of the Boston Congregational Club on Monday, arrangements were made to celebrate Forefathers' Day in Music Hall, Dec. 21st. Rev. Dr. Calkins of Newton, who has recently returned from Europe, was called upon and spoke briefly, saying among other things that he found more religious liberty in Paris than in Boston, for he could preach there in a public square without first asking the consent of the authorities. Mr. Thomas Weston of Newton called the attention of the club to the recent Supreme Court decision on the Sunday laws, and the probability that it would be made the pretext for an attempt to repeal the laws. On motion of the Rev. Mr. Boynton of Januaica Plain a committee of three, consisting of Mr. Weston, Mr. C. W. Hill and Mr. Arthur W. Tufts, was appointed to take this matter into consideration with a view to action by the club.

—The second of the monthly vesper services at Chaming Church called out a large andrence on Sunday evening. The music was of an excellent character and finely rendered by the church quartette, which in itself would be a great attraction. But Rev. Mr. Hombrooke's discourse was the most interesting part of the service, especially to the large number from other churches who were present, and who only hear him occasionally. His subject was, "The religion of James Russell Lowell," as shown in his poems. It was an attractive theme and handled in an inspiring manner. Extracts from the poems were woven into the discourse, and their beauties brought out in the clearest manner. The preacher showed that there is a deeply religious side to Mr. Lowell's writings, and the better part of his nature. The carees of the world and the narrowing tendencies of every day life must be fought against and conquered, if a man is to become what God intended him to be. The whole discourse was an eloquent plea for better hving and higher thinking, and the making of one's religion a

The former won 8 to 0, but as they were bigger men than their opponents, the High School team did well to keep the score down. Several quite serious accidents happened during the game.

The School Committee.

The School Committee.

The school board met on Wednesday evening, There were present Messrs. Ames. Hagar, Weed. Stone, Gould, Smith, Dickinson, Philbrick, Walton, Converse, French, and Rev. Dr. Shinn. The appointment of Miss Annie E. Merritt of Montague as teacher in the first district, and of Miss Mary E. Wall and Miss Mary Noble as unassigned teachers was confirmed. The expenses of the latter in going to and from the schools to which they might be assigned was ordered paid. The expenses to the current month were reported at $10,580.-67, and a balance of $10,166.96 is left unexpended. The city council was asked to transfer $2,000 from the appropriation for schools to that for school incidentals. Mr. Converse recommended that the rules be amended so that the committee out leave hooks recommended the purchase of eleven sets of a new kind of anatomical studies, at $35 each, and the agent was present and exhibited them. The illustrations are certainly very realistic and would be a great addition so a dissecting room, but Dr. Shinn suggested that it was carrying the study of physiology rather-too far to use these maps in the Grammar schools, although a set for the High school would be valuable. It was not well to terrify small-fidder with too vivid representations of the wonderful way in which they were made. After considerable debate, in which Superintendent Emersony Mr. Philbrick and Mr. Weed urged their purchase, and Messrs. Dickinson, Converse and Waiton doubted the wisdom of using them indiscriminately in the Grammar schools, the order was modified, and only three were ordered.

The salaries of Miss Harriert S. Bachelder of the Williams school, and Miss Georgia Beckman of the Wallams school and Miss Georgia Beckman of the Masoa school were fixed at $550.

Dr. Shinn reported from the committee on music, and said that the teacher of music found that all but 10 per cent of the scholars in the schools were able to sing, but he found great difficulty is teaching in the lower grades from the lack of suitable charts that all but 10 per ent et eacher of miser founds that all but 10 per ent of the scholars in the schools were able to sing, but he found great difficulty is teaching in the lower grades from the lack of suitable charts and books. The music committee had recommended that suitable charts he purchased, but the text book committee widdrestised. The music teacher asked that the 1823-book committee allow him to appear before them and explain the difficulties. After some discussion the committee promised to give him an exportunity.

The report of the Evening School was read, and it was stated that it was one of the three evening schools in the state regarded as successful. The salary of Miss Helen M. Eckmann of the Hamilton school was fixed at $550.

Appleton's Science primers were recommended for use in the High School, and Hosmer's Life of Samuel Adams as a reading book.

It was voted to change the noon storm signal from 1.15 to 12.45, the change to begin January 1. After other reports of minor interest, and some nimportant routine business, the board adjourned.

City Government.

The Common Council met Monday even ing, with all the members present. Business from the Common Council was disposed of in concurrence. when the resolution in regard to the Williams school came up, Councilman Atherton made a reply to Alderman Grant's speech. He read from the records of the meetings of the public property committee in support of his statements at the previous meeting. On April 26, a vote was passed, appointing him a sub-committee to secure estimates of grading and concreting about the Williams school. On April 30, it was voted that the chairman, Alderman Grant, and Councilman Atherton be a subcommittee to do the work, the expense not to exceed $750. "I did the grading, and saw Mr. Simpson about the concreting; Alderman Grant said it had better not be done in hot weather, but Mr. Simpson said that the concrete could be laid in hot weatheras well as at any time. I saw the city en-gineer and procured the number of square yards desired, and Mr. Grant promised to see Mr. Simpson about it. September came—five months after the order was passed, and nothing was done. The chairman says that a vote was passed at a comman says that a vote was passed a committee meeting, at which I was not present, not to do the concreting. The meeting was held Sept. 30th, at which I was present, but a half hour late, as I made a mistake about the hour of meeting. It was then voted not to do the work till it was found that there was money enough to do it. On October 1st, by the auditor's redo it. On October 1st, by the auditor's report, there was $2,035 left of the appropriation, and the concreting would only have cost $250. The chairman put me in the wrong light in the other board, and I make these quotations from the records to show that I was right. Since the statement made by me in the previous council meeting, a portion of the concrete has been laid around the school building. With these remarks, I am willing to concur with the other board in regard to the resolutions."

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

Judge John C. Park, Dr. J. F. Frisbie and Jesse Fewkes presented a petition from the Newton Natural History Society, showing the great benefit the society is to Newton as a means of public instruction, and scating that their valuable collection of minerals, which ought to be open for public inspection, was now stored in the house of the curator of the society. It should be a branch of the public library, for the instruction of the people, and it was asked that a room in the library be devoted to it, where the minerals could be properly displayed. It was also stated that the society's place of meeting in Eliot Lower Hall was unsuitable from the lack of ventilation and the disturbing noises in the building, and the society petitioned that Armory Hall be given to them for their monthly meetings, rent free, on such evenings as would not interfere with the military company, for their public lectures. The petition was referred to the committee on public property. NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

ESTIMATES FOR THE COMING YEAR.

ESTIMATES FOR THE COMING YEAR.

The report of the Finance Committee in regard to the estimated receipts and expenditures for the coming year was received and accepted; the receipts are estimated at $115,850—$2,700 less than last year; the income from meters and service pipe is put at $2,000 less, the National bank tax $1,000 less; these were adopted without debate. The almshouse expenses and repairs are put at $4,000—the same as last year; the Armory expenses at $1,400, which includes an order of $400 charged to 1887. There was some debate over this, as it was an increase of $700 over last year, but the expense of lighting, heating and caring for the present Armory is greater than for the old one; for books, stationery, and printing the estimate is $2,300—an increase of $150; for board of health, the same as last year, $4,000, and for burial grounds and superintendent's salary, $400. All were adopted.

The salary of the City Engineer is raised from $2,100 to $2,500, and caused quite an extended debate; Councilman Billings amended that it be made the same as last year. He thought the present salary was a liberal one for the office, that plenty of men would take it for that, and did not like the idea of continually increasing the salaries, especially as it was the high salaries that always received the increase of salary. The City Engineer, le said, was the one officer in the City Hall which should be paid more than any other. It was the only one which required a special dead of values of the same as greated of values of the committee, and is the service of this committee.

Concilman Ross was surprised that for finance committee, should offer to raise a man's salary without his asking for it. He thought he city engineer was paid as generously as any other city official, and he did not think he would leave if he did not receive the increase.

Concilman Ross was surprised that he finance committee, should offer to raise a man's salary without his asking for it. He thought he city engineer was paid as engineer was paid as generously as any other city official, and he did not think he would leave if he did not receive the increase.

Conneilman Chadwick hoped the increase would be granted. The city engineer could not be replaced for less than $3.00, and the increase was granted unanimously by the committee. The position required a competent man, and the duties had been largely increased.

Conneilman Edmands objected, and said that if the highway committee required as much of the engineer, they should pay him a saiary. The board of health was also continually calling upon him, to inspect plumbing, and it had really two agents, Mr. Mosman and Mr. Noyes. A portion of the engineer's saiary ought to come out of the appopriation for the board of health. Mr. Noyes deserved more saiary, but it should not come out of the engineer's separation.

Councilman Hollis said that the chaiman of the highway committee hear recommended the increase, and believed in paying the acata of the departments good fleved in paying the acata of the departments good lieved in paying the acata of the departments good lieved in paying the acata of the departments good lieved in paying the acata of the departments good the said that the chaiman of the lieved in paying the acata of the departments good the said the said that the chaiman of the said the said that the chaiman of the said that the chaiman of the paying the acata of the departments good the said that the chaim and the said the said that the chaim and the said lieved in paying the neads of the departments good salaries. The salary should equal the responsibility.

Councilman Dix said that for the last year or more he had been convinced that it would be wise economy to increase the salary of the city engin-coonomy to increase the salary of the city engineer.

Councilman French said that the duties of the city clerk and auditor could be performed by any good bookkeeper, and they received sufficient, but there are not a half dozen men in this city come there are not a half dozen men in this city come present to fill the position of city engineer, and none of them would do it at the present salary. Hecause Mr. Noves is a modest man, and has not asked for the increase, is no reason a hy it should not be given him.

Councilman Kennedy said that the city engineer was often called on by the public property committee to draw plaus for buildings, and in that way saved the city handreds of dollars. He was kept at the unit that recall the clerk at hight, and summoned to meet the committee at 7 in the morning, and he more than earned even the increased salary.

The increase was finally voted. The other items ing, and he more than earned even the increased salary.

The increase was finally voted. The other items in the city engineer's department were voted without debate, the whole appropriation amounting to $7,600, $850 more than last year.

The City Hell expenses, $2,000, an increase of $400, was voted with debate.

The first portion of the fire department estimates, comprising salaries of chief, assistant, engineers, drivers, and stokers, amounting to $0.850, an increase of $600, were adopted as a whole. The second portion was adopted as recommended by the finance committee, with the exception that $500 was added to the Incidental appropriation, for the purchase of a bell for Ward t hose house, Lower Falls, which made the total appropriation, $25,000, an increase of $500.

The salaries of city officers were then taken up. Councilman Redpath moved that the mayor's salary be increased to $2,000. The salary now was a mere trifle, and hardly paid the car fares and other expenses incident to the office. Even at $2,000 the salary would be inadequate to the duties, which took about all the mayor's time. He explained that he did not make the motion in the interests of any one.

Councilman Edmands said that the mayor was the head of all the departments, and if his salary was increased at all, it should be increased to a sum in proportion to the duties and responsibilities of the office. It was not intended to pay him for his time, only to furnish him a little pia money for actual expenses.

Councilman Ross said he hated to surprise the mayor by raising his salary, and the proposition was voted down.

The increase of the salary of the City Treasurer from $2,700 to $3,000 then came up, and councilman Edmands moved that it be made the same as last year. Councilman Fiske said that the position was one of great responsibility many hundred the salary ought to be increased. Councilman Johnson said that $3,000 was little enough salary compared with the heavy bonds the treasurer had to give, and the amount of money he handled. It crease of $300, making his salary fifteen nundred dollars.

Councilman Johnson moved that the salary of the City Auditor be increased two hundred dollars, to include clerical assistance. If the duties of the treasurer had increased, so had the duties of the treasurer had increased, so had the duties of the auditor, and if the city clerk was voted five hundred and twenty dollars for clerical assistance, the city auditor should certainly be voted an addition. The weekly payment system made the work harder in the auditor's office of the city treasurer.

President French called Councilman Fiske to the chair, and said that the question of increase had been considered in the finance committee, and been voted down. He did not like the system of bookkeeping in the auditor's office, and criticized some of the details.

Councilman Atherton said that in justice to the been voted down. He did not like the system of bookkeeping in the auditor's office, and criticized some of the details.

Conneilman Atherton said that in justice to the auditor he could testify that the records of the committees of which the auditor was clerk, were carefully written up, as he had had occasion to examine them that afternoon.

Councilman Kennedy said that if the system of bookkeeping in the office was not satisfactory to the finance committee, why did it not have another instituted. The auditor would be glad to follow the directions of the committee. It had instituted another system of bookkeeping in the treasurer's office, and why did it not do the same in the auditor's office, firl was not satisfied. The auditor's work had been very largely increased, and he should be treated fairly. There was no question but that he should have clerical assistance, the same as the city clerk, at certain seasons of the year. The two hundred dollars would not pay for an assistant all the time.

Councilman Redpath said that as a member of the committee on accounts, he could testify to the great increase in the auditor's work, and he thought it would be better to wait till the occasion demanded an assistant, and then the money could be voted, and this opinion finally prevailed, and the increase was voted down. The sainary of the city solicitor was increased from $1,000 to $1,250, after some debate in which Councilman Johnson and Kennedy to state that the present incumbent tully earned his salary, and arranged last Friday before the full bench, and which the City Solicitor had so far conducted successfully.

The appropriation for the massistant assessors

The latter instanced the Beger case, which was argued last Friday before the Inil bench, and which the City Solicitor had so far conducted successfully.

The appropriation for the assistant assessors was raised from four hundred and twenty-five dollars to eight hundred dollars, and the remaining salaries were not altered. The total for salaries is seventeen thousand two hundred and ninety-five dollars, compared with fourteen thousand four hundred dollars, last year.

The highway department appropriation then came up, and the allowance for general repairs was increased from sixty five thousand dollars to seventy thousand dollars, and that for widening, reconstructing and improvements to twenty two thousand dollars from fifteen thousand dollars, making it the same as last year. The total for the departments is one hundred and twenty seven thousand, five hundred dollars, an increase of about five hundred dollars, an increase of about five hundred dollars was added to allow of concerting the walk around Farlow Parks making the total appropriation three thousand dollars, an increase of 500 over last year. The appropriation includes 500 dollars for setting out trees between the villages. In the police department appropriation, the total appropriation was levely three thousand, three hundred and fifty dollars, an increase of nearly two thousand dollars. The salary of two sergeants was put down at one thousand and met yield dollars and to take thousand and they live dollars acade, but Mavor Kimball happened in and explained that it was proposed to have one captain at 12,000 dollars, instead of two sergeants was put down at one thousand and met yield dollars and to take the additional out of the appropriation for behoods its increased 3,500 dollars, an increase of 1,000 dollars, instead of two sergeants was put down at one thousand and met yield dollars and to be thousand to the propriation for temporary service, so that the total would not be distanced in the propriation of the appropriation for temporary service, so t

THE CITIZEN'S CONVENTION.

MAYOR KIMBALL RENOMINATED WITH MUCH ENTHUSIASM

The Citizen's Convention met at the City Hall Saturday evening, and the attendance filled nearly every seat in the hall. All parties were represented, Republicans, In-dependents and Democrats, and, as one of the speakers said, it was one of the most the speakers said, it was one of the most democratic gatherings ever held in Newton, Citizens met, not as partisans, but to show their approval of the excellent administra-tion of Mayor Kimball, and to express their belief that the best interests of the city demanded his renomination.

The convention was called to order by Mr. E. O. Childs, chairman of the citizen's committee, who made a brief speech, in which he said that the convention had met not as Democrats, or as Republicans, but as citizens, believing it was right to throw aside all distinctions of party in nominat-ing city officers. "There is no doubt but that the ticket you nominate will be elected The strict party Republicans grant you the right to pay taxes in Newton, and conthe right to pay taxes in Newton, and contribute to the prosperity of the city, and you may exercise the right to vote in nominating city officers, provided you are willing to take part in a strict party caucus, and vote for the delegates to a city convention. You can have no voice in selecting the strict Republican candidate, but in this convention you may vote for the candidate whom you prefer, and so have the right which every citizen should have. The Republicans will soon learn the lesson that strict party caucuses should never be called in Newton; they had one illustration of it last year, and they will have another this year." After expressing his pleasure in seeing so many present, who believed in non-partisan politics in city affairs, Mr. Childs read the call for the convention, and called for nominations for a permanent chairman.

Childs read the call for the convention, and called for nominations for a permanent chairman.

Major William F. Lawrence was chosen, and in taking the chair, said that we have met here not as partisans, but as citizens, who believe that city officers should be men of ability and honesty, and who had the courage of their convictions. The history of the past three years had demonstrated the success of the citizen's movement. The credit of the city was unexcelled, its affairs had been wisely and economically administered, and the taxes had been reduced. It was a safe principle to let well enough alone, and the ticket to be nominated would be certain of success. For the fourth time the citizens of Newton would rebuke partisan nominations for municipal offices. Major Lawrence's brief speech was received with cheers.

Mr. Chrs. W. Shephard was elected secretary, when the meeting was ready for business.

Mr. Wm. E. Plunmer of Ward 4 said that

Mr. Chrs. W. Shephard was elected secretary, when the meeting was ready for business.

Mr. Wm. E. Plummer of Ward 4 said that he had been a voter in Newton for 7 and 20 years, a Democrat in national matters, but in municipal affairs he believed in choosing candidates without regard to party. The city was really like a corporation, and it should have at its hand a man of ability, of honesty, of capacity, and one who would see that for every dollar expended, a dollar's worth was received. The greatest good of the greatest number should be the principle acted upon in choosing municipal officers, and where will be found a man so capable, so affable, so come-at-able, as J. Wesley Kimball. (Great applause.) He is never too busy to attend to the wants of every caller, whether high or low, rich or poor. In this respect he is as good a Democrat as there is in the notion. He has been faithful in all the positions to which he has been elevated; he has a wide experience in city affairs, and he is the most valuable mayor the city could have. I move that this gentleman who has served the city so well and faithfully be renominated. (Long continued applause.)

could have. I move that this gentleman who has served the city so well and faithfully be renominated. (Long continued applause.)

Mr. E. A. Paddock of Ward 3 seconded the motion, and said he had known Mr. Kimball intimately, and he endorsed all that Mr. Plummer had so well stated. He amended by moving that Mr. Kimball be renominated by acclamation.

Mr. Plummer accepted the amendment. Mr. Thomas Drew of Ward 3 said that before the motion was put, he wished to say a few words. He did not ask that the nomination be made by acclamation, as a Democrat, but as a citizen. He did not believe in carrying partizanship into city affairs. What matter in a city like Newton, whether the mayor believed in free trade or protection? The chief thing was to know that he was fully devoted to the interests of the city of Newton, and that it elected he would administer the city affairs to the best of his judgment, and see that the appropriations were honestly expended. It was a shame and a disgrace to insist that a city must have a Republican majority, or a Democrat, because of a Democratic majority. When a resident of Worcester, although an ardent free soiler, he had voted for one of the most obnoxious Democrats in the city, because he believed he had the business ability required. It was an augury of better times, when the citizens of Newton met together, and did not ask of a candidate what party he belonged to, but is he honest and capable. We have tried the man, and found that he is the right man, in the right place. (Applause.)

Major Lawrence then put the motion, and Mayor Kimball was renominated with a shout that shook the building, no dissenting voice being heard.

Mr. Henry F. Ross then moved that a committee of three from each ward be appointed to select candidates for the board of aldermen and the school committee, and for councilmen.

Mr. E. O. Childs amended that the committee be increased to 5 from each ward.

pointed to select candidates for the board of aldermen and the school committee, and for councilmen.

Mr. E. O. Childs amended that the committee be increased to 5 from each ward, and they report candidates for aldermen and for the school committee, to be nominated by the convention, and also report the names of candidates for councilmen, as the convention had no right to dictate to the wards in regard to whom they should have to represent them in the council.

This caused considerable discussion. Mr. Paddock moved to nominate candidates for aldermen and the school board from the floor, and leave the councilmential afterwards. Mr. Childs said that the convention would have the right to reject any of the names reported by the committee. Mr. W. H. Mague thought that every man present should be a member of the committee, and that the nomination should be made in the hall.

Mr. Jesse C. Ivy said there was one thing to be considered, the convention must end sometime, and if nominations were made from the floor, it would take all night. The committee would be simply the agents of the convention, and the convention would have a chance to vote on the nominations they reported. It was the most expeditions way of doing the business and also the most judicious. It is presumable, at least, that the committees would nominate the men best fitted for the positions to be filled, and the whole thing would be in the power of the convention, as it would have an opportunity to approve what the committee should do.

Mr. II. F. Ross objected, as he wanted no slate-making, but the whole thing done openly.

openly.

After more discussion, the motion that a After more discussion, the motion that a committee of five from each ward be appointed prevailed, and the Chairman appointed the following:
Ward I. E. O. Childis, Geo. R. Aston, Geo. E. Pike, John Habn and Edward

Ward 2. D. C. Heath, F. S. Rollins, J. W. Stover, H. J. Preston, J. N. Horri-

Ward 4. Bernard Early, Fred C. Lyon, W. A. Leonard, John Dolan, W. E. Plummer.
Ward 5. R. T. Sullivan, Thomas Coughlin, Phillip T. Begley, C. H. Hale, Wm. Kinefick.
Ward 6. S. M. Jackson, J. W. Hill, G. E. Gilbert, C. C. Barton, C. N. Brackett.
Ward 7. J. C. Lyy, J. Harris Reed, Howard B. Allen, A. C. Mudge, W. J. Follett.
Councilman Redpath of Ward 2 moved that a committee of three be appointed to wait upon Mayor Kimball, and ask his presence at the convention. The motion passed and the chairman appointed Councilman Redpath, Dr. Crockett and C. P. Harkins, as that committee. Dr. Crockett created some laughter by saying that he really could not act, as he was a delegate to the other convention. E. E. Bourdon was appointed in his place.

The convention then took a recess of about an hour, to await the report of the committee.

MAYOR KIMBALL ARRIVES.

MAYOR RIMBALL ARRIVES.

When the convention re-assembled, Mayor Kimball entered the hall, and was received with three cheers and a tiger, as he made his way to the platform. When the applause had subsided, Major Lawrence arose, and addressing the Mayor, said it was his duty as well as his pleasure to inform him that the convention had nominated him without discussion for the position of Mayor of Newton. (cheers) "We have watched you for three years and have marked with approval your course in giving us a non-partisan administration, of marked excellence in every respect; you have reduced the taxes, besides giving us a good government of unsurpassed efficiency." Turning to the convention he said, "I now present to you our next Mayor, J. Wesley Kimball."

The convention then lost all order, and us a good government of unsurpassed efficiency." Turning to the convention he said, "I now present to you our next Mayor, J. Wesley Kimball."

The convention then lost all order, and the applause and cheering was deafening. Hats were waved, and men shouted themselves hoarse. Such a reception would have gratified any man, and Mayor Kimball evidently appreciated the enthusiasm which greeted him. He extended his most hearty thanks to the convention for the reception given him, and also for the recomination, which had a peculiar value as coming from such a large assemblage of the best citizens of Newton. He appreciated the non-partisan character of the convention and their purpose to select such candidates as would hold the interests of the city paramount to any other considerations. He appreciated most of all the unanimity with which he had been nominated, especially as he had not sought the renomination, and had made no effort to obtain it. It had been his purpose to perform his duties in such a manner as would be satisfactory to the citizens, to see that the city money was prudently expended, and that for every dollar paid out, a dollar's worth should be obtained; and if the voters ratified his nomination, he would perform his duties as much better as he could. His experience of the past three years would be useful to him in the performance of his duties, and he should not only look after the interests of the citizens, but forward in every possible way the progress and prosperity of our beloved city of Newton. He closed by thanking the convention for their kindness and attention and the applause broke out afresh. When quiet had been restored the committee made their report, and the following gentlemen were nominated: For the board of aldermen, J. E. Hollis of Ward 1, A. R. Mitchell of Ward 2, J. H. Nickerson of Ward 3, Geo. M. Fiske of Ward 4. Geo. Pettee of Ward 5; no candidates were reported: Ward 1, W. F. Paul, T. J. Hartnett; Ward 2, W. H. Chadwick, E. W. Redpath; Ward 3, William F. Lawrence, A. J. Fiske; Wa

The statement that there was no appeal from the nominations presented for the common council, caused considerable debate, Mr. H. F. Ross and Mr. Paddock remonstrating.

Mr. Plummer said the committee had gone as far as it could in recommending names, and the convention could not properly nominate candidates for the common council, as that was a ward matter; the wards could take such action as they pleased about the candidates recommended.

Mr. E. O. Childs moved that a ward and city committee of 5 be appointed to be at the polls and have charge of the election, and that all vacancies be referred to the committee, with power to act.

This gave rise to a long discussion and many amendments, and a number of heated speeches were made in advocacy of them.

Amendment after amendment was voted them.

Amendment after amendment was voted down, apparently for the fun of the thing, as the resolution finally adopted was the same as that embodied in several amendments, which was that the committees be appointed by the chair. Major Lawrence immediately appointed the committees which had presented the nomination and the convention adjourned at 11.30, after giving the committees power to fill vacancies.

THE TWO CONVENTIONS.

There was a noticeable difference between the two city conventions which have been held to choose a candidate for mayor. One was free to all, large in numbers, enthusiastic, harmonious, and confident in the justice of their cause. The other was composed of only 35 men, the candidate was not endorsed by a single speaker, and the customary motion to make the nomi-nation unanimous was omitted for obvious reasons. Mr. Powers can well complain of the conduct of the delegates from his own ward, for some one of them might have had ward, for some one of the courtest a few words in endorsement of him. This action was in strong contrast to the hearty endorsement Mayor Kimball received in the Citizens' convention, from both Republicans and Democrats.

The Republican convention made another mistake, and that was in flourishing the party whip so ostentatiously, as it brought out the fact that fully one third of the delegates would not support Mr. Powers, and were sent by their respective caucuses with that understanding. It is an outrageous doctrine, whether old-fashioned or not, that a man who participates in a consection support of the properties of the properties of the participates of the participates of the participates in a consection support of the participates o The Republican convention made another vention surrenders his right to vote con-scientiously and honestly, for what he be-lieves to be the best interests of his city, his state or the nation, and is bound to vote for the nominee, however the nomination is obtained, or what may be his character. No man with any self-respect would submit to such a curtailment of his rights, and no party can afford to make such a claim. Party first and country last is a most pernicious doctrine, and leads to all sorts of political corruption.

The Republican convention made another mistake, and that was in not deferring to. the wishes of Ward Two, in the matter of an alderman. It is the second time this year that a Ward Two caucus has been unanimous in the presentation of a candidate, only to have a convention refuse to listen to its wishes. Other wards are not treated in this discourteous manner, and it is not surprising that when election day comes the voters of Ward Two rebel. Mr. Grant has made an admirable alderman, but he is too good a man to be used simply as a club to punish the voters of Ward Two. The introduction of his name was a mere pretext, as the speeches made proved, if the five delegates from that ward had been willing to promise to vote for Mr. Powers, Mr. Mitchell would have been nominated. Five votes are evidently worth a high price, in the eyes of the men who represented Wards One, Six and Seven.

As for the right of a ward to nominate its candidate for alderman, Messrs. Ellison and Cobb are on record, and they can perhaps recall their indignation a few years ago, when a convention refused to nominate their caucus candidate. Their feelings then ought to give them a sort of fellow feeling for the voters of Ward Two.

Judging simply from the proceedings of the two conventions, and the bad blood engendered in the Republican one, the Citizens' candidate will be triumphantly elected, as he ought to be. It is a great mistake to carry partisanship to extreme lengths in city anairs, and the tendency is growing both in Newton and everywhere else, to both in Newton and everywhere else, to vote for the best men irrespective of party. Mayor Kimball's experience, his conserva-tism, his honesty, and his devotion to the city, ought to call to his support every voter who has the best interests of the city at heart. The friends of the other candi date will work hard, but they are heavily handicapped at the start, and the citizens will be able to gain an easy victory if they put forth the necessary efforts.

THE SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN says of will apply equally well in Newton: "The mayoralty is too important a place to be passed around to light the political eigar of one man after another and then tossed in the gutter. It ought to be occupied and administered by a leading man with no ulterior ends to serve. But it is poor policy to swap horses, unless some improvement can be affected by it. The voters must look at this matter with a more serious eye, single to the welfare of the city." The citizen's nvention took this ground when it renominated Mayor Kimball.

THE HIGH SCHOOL REVIEW this week signs of improvement. The contents are bright, the personals and local illusions in The contents are good taste, and those whose school days good taste, and those whose school days have long been over will find much to interest them in the Review. Some of the longer articles have decided merit and would not be out of place in a more pretentious publication. We are glad to note that the circulation of the Review is interest. creasing, and every citizen who is interested in the High School should be a sub-any women on the school board, but if the same effort had been made at the former as was made at the latter, we believe it would have been successful. The mothers of the city are as much interested in the schools as the fathers, and either Mrs. K. M. Phipps or Mrs. A. J. Hawthorne would have been a credit to the city on the school board. When another election comes round, it is to be hoped that the nominating conventions will be more liberal, not to say more just. to say more just.

THE voters of the city will have an excellent chance for selection in making up cellent chance for selection in making up their tickets for election day. By the proper amount of scratching, most every one can fix up a first class ticket. A man that votes a straight ticket, takes the easiest method of discharging his duty, but it is one that does not require a great amount of intelligence. amount of intelligence.

MAYOR KIMBALL has succeeded in get ting reduced rates over the Circuit road, which is almost as much of a victory as the the thanks of the citizens. A man who is always doing so much for the city is the kind of a mayor Newton wants.

SECRETARY PIEECE had a larger plurality than any other state officer, which shows that the veterans of the state are not much influenced by demagogues.

THE official count shows that Mr. Burnett had 2II more votes than Congressman Ely, which is a small majority, but enough,

REDUCED FARES.

MAYOR KIMBALL SECURES REDUCED RATES BETWEEN NEWTON STATIONS.

The following correspondence is self explanatory, but it shows what persistent work can do. Mayor Kimball has written numerous letters and had a dozen or more interviews with the Boston & Albany officials, in regard to reducing the rates of fare over the Circuit road, for the benefit of scholars attending the High School, and citizens desiring to visit City Hall, and all who have occasion to patronize the Circuit road, in going from one part of Newton to patronize the West another. He was finally reversed on West. another. He was finally rewarded on Wednesday, when he called upon President Bliss in regard to the matter. Mr. Bliss promised to attend to it at some future time, but Mayor Kimball told him that there was no time like the present, and finally succeeded in obtaining an answer to a letter written by him Oct. 26, fixing the rate for 100 ride tickets at a large reduction from single fares. The correspontion from single fares. The correspondence is as follows:

WEST NEWTON, MASS., Oct. 26th, 1886.
To the President and Directors Boston and Albany R. R.:
Sendemen,—I desire again to call your attention to the public necessity of a reduction of fares now prevailing on the line of the Circuit R. R.

If you will permit a suggestion in the matter, I would say that 100 ride tickets should be furnished at about half the single ticket rate.
For instance, the fare from Chestnut Hill to Newton is 23c.; by 100 rides it should not exceed 12c, and between stations at the same rates, except where 4c, rates exist.

Very respectfully,
J. Wesley Kimball, Mayor.

—A very interesting and successful chamber concert was given at Lasell Seminary for young women last Tuesday evening by the Orphean club, with a mixed chorus and assisted by Misses Villa Whitney White, soprano; Laura Webster, cello and Florence E. Bailey accompanist. Some dozen selections including vocal and instrumental were presented, all of which were very warmly received. Among those of the artists whose efforts were more especially creditable may be mentioned the several songs by Miss White, and the seranade "O Swallow," calling imperatively for an encore. The celloist, Miss Webster, who has been studying for two years in Europe, proved by her fine and tasteful execution, that her time had been well improved. The chorus, "The stars are in the quiet skies" by a mixed chorus, was very well rendered, as was also the "Hunting song," as a whole the affair was a fine suecess and highly enjoyable.

—Mr. C. B. Kendall has again shown his Kendall controlled the chorus completely, and golden opinions were expressed on all sides. The playing of the little violinist, Miss Helen Turner, and the piano solo of Mrs. Smith, with two songs by Miss Mary Howe in the first part of the evening, were all well received. We are informed that a handsome sum was realized for the benefit of the church.

—On Thursday morning of last week Mary McLaughlin, seven years old daughter of John McLaughlin, fell on Concord street and broke her leg. A physician was called, but it was 24 hours before the limb was set. This seeming act of inhumanity has caused much unfavorable comment. The child is now at the Cottage Hospital, and is doing nicely.

To the Editor of the Graphic

To the Editor of the Graphie:

Is there any need of change in the next election for mayor of our city? When this question is seriously considered the candid reply will be—"We had better bear the ills (if any) we have rather than 4ly to those we know not off." The tax-payer has no great interest in jingle box political controversy, but who is best for the interest and well-being of our good city.

The questions arrising in the average voters mind will be: Is it possible to improve our financial standing by a change at this time? Can a man who has lived in the city but a few years, with no financial experience in any direction, expect to excel in the important elements in which the citizen's are most interested.

(Written for the Graphic.) THANKSGIVING.

I saw where Gratitude on bended knee,
With meekly-folded hands before her face,
Within the sacred altar's chancel-space,
Rendered to God Thanksgiving—prayerfully.

And then I saw with vision-gifted eyes,
A white-winged angel bear away the prayer
Up to the throne of God, and lay it there;
For all our prayers are kept in Paradise.

The altar vanished; in its place there stood A home where Poverty and Want abode; And there I saw a kindly gift bestowed By one whose action spoke his gratitude.

And then again, with vision-gifted eyes, I saw the angel bear with joyful speed Up to the throne his record of the deed; For all our deeds are known in Paradise.

Then by the angels' joyous welcome there, The glory-song that rang all heaven thro', And by the gracious smile of God, I knew That kindly deeds were more than simple prayer

And kindly deeds, however great or small, May better speak than words our gratefulness And love that lights a brother's dark distress, Against our empty prayers outweighs them all. JAMES H. GILKEY.

LOUIE AND I.

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

If I had been the least bit pretty shouldn't have been surprised at it all; or if I had even been bright and witty; but such a little simple simpleton as I!

I never in all my life had the least ex-pectation of lovers, or of any sort of ad-miring glances; and I never had any. And sometimes Mother used to say she guessed it was just as well; for if she had had to dress two girls out for their pretty looks, as she did one, it would have beggared her. Mother only had a little money, just barely enough to live on, and some of the princi-pal going every year; but it wouldn't have been in human nature, having a daughter so pretty as Louie, not to want her to have the best that would set off her peach-bloom the best that would set off her peach-bloom beauty; and, for my part, I never grudged Louie a rose or a ribbon. I couldn't have worn them if I had had them; for I was far too proud to try to do what Nature hadn't, or to pretend I thought such things became me; and I liked my print dresses and plain collars better for myself.

But when Louie was dressed in her muslins till she looked like one of the old-fashioned blush roses, so white without and so delicately flushed within, her lovely yellow hair breaking out in conversions. hair breaking out in sunny curls all over her head, and she all radiant, as you might say, with her skin, her smiles, her teeth, her great blue, beaming eyes—then I used to like to look at her as much as any of her lovers did; to look at her as I would look at any lovely picture; and she always turned from her gayest scene—the dear little person-to give her sweetest smile to me.

So when Dennis began all at once to come to our house, as if he had just seen Louie for the first time in his life, I was only delighted. For every one who knew him loved and honored Dennis Reed, who was the soul of all integrity: and if he wasn't a beauty himself, he was a stalwart son of Saul, and had the nicest little place in the region-a cottage up a lane, over looking the river, and with a wood behind its orchard and across the railway cut, to keep off the east wind—if the east wind keep off the east wind—if the east wind could ever blow in that sunny nook with a garden spot made and blooming in every cranny of the rocks around it.

But my first thought was none of that—only that I liked Dennis Reed so much I liked to have him feel how lovely Louie was; I liked to think of her as safe with such a sweet, strong soul as I fancied his to be; and last of all I thought how pleasant was the home he had to give her, and it pleased me to place Louie there, in my thoughts, among all the rocks and flowers, looking out upon the river.

Not that it made any odds to Dennis what I thought shout it all. I doubt if in those days he knew any more than that I existed, going his happy way with his head in the clouds, and eyes and heart only for his love.

So he married her, and took her away:

his love.

So he married her, and took her away; and a happier nest of singing birds than that in the little cottage among the rocks and flowers could nowhere have been found, were in my own heart, at the sight that in the little cottage among the rocks and flowers could nowhere have been found, unless it were in my own heart, at the sight of the happiness there.

But then Mother fell sick, and it took all my time to care for her; and I couldn't go up to Louie's very often; tor I had everything to do at home, and was tired out by nightfall, and often up half the night besides. Louie couldn't very well come down often; and if she had come, she wouldn't have known what to do. Poor Mother! Once, I remember, she said to me, "I don't know but it's more satisfactory to have one daughter plain, than anything else." And it made my heart bound. And then I reproached myself for my selfishness in caring to have her say that over Louie's head, as it were; but I remembered it long afterward, and sometimes it used to give me a throb of joy when everything was dreary, and I seemed to be alone in the world.

For Mother died presently. And then it turned out that she had been living on her little property more than we had dreamed, and Louie's outlit and her own long illness and its bills had used up money. And when everything was paid, there was only enough left for me to hire one room as a sort of refuge when I came home at night from working at my trade; for I had quite a knack at dressmaking. I did not put on mourning; for I was glad that she had gone before she knew that all the property was gone, and she, with her proud spirit, would have had to be dependent. But Louie did—and oh! what a beauty she was, with her black crapes falling around her, so waxen fair and rosy and transparent! Of course she didn't miss Mother the way I did. How could she, with Dennis waiting on her every wish? And she didn't seem to want anybody but Dennis, either; so I didn't see a great deal of her, only when she had something new to make up, or something old to alter over; and then, she and Dennis were out, most of the time, strolling among the rocks or planting a new flower-garden, or she was going to meet him coming from his work, or running into the

And I will conclude that trying on times were trying times; and no wonder. For if you had such a perfect little figure as Louie had, you would want your dress to look as if you had been melted and poured into it, too. I used to wonder at Louie then, a little, sometimes; not for not sitting at home sewing and helping me on the work, because you might as well have asked a humming-bird to do that; but for not taking more interest in the house and keeping things trig and tidy. And I used to be afraid that if I were Dennis, and there were holes in my socks, and half the buttons off my clothes, and my coat and hat never brushed, and I came home and found nothing for dinner—not even the cloth laid—and my wife off enjoying herself somewhere else, and the dust everywhere so that I could write my name, that I shouldn't feel recompensed for all that, by having my wife stroll round hauging on my arm, looking as pretty as a new blown rose. And yet although the house must often have been thoroughly uncomfortable to Dennis, he never gave a sign that it was not Paradise itself; and I came to the conclusion that he didn't really miss those other things, and was satisfied with what he had

I used to go up into the Eden sometimes, without being sent for, and mend went.

I used to go up into the Eden sometimes, without being sent for, and mend up everything, and put the whole house straight; but I couldn't go so very often, on account of my work; and, besides, I had a sensation of intruding where two people wanted but each other.

But at last the babies came; and then I had to go. And Louie was wild with delight, and insisted on having them laid on the pillow close to her cheek, and talked and laughed and cooed and cried to them with such glittering eyes and dazzling color in her face, and said it was all she wanted, even if she were in Heaven tomorrow!

"But your husband, Louie!" I exclaimed.

morrow!

"But your husband, Louie!" I exclaimed.

"Oh! husbands are all very well," she said. "But I haven't been such an awfully good wife. You'd have made Dennis a great deal better wife, dear, for the matter of that. But my little sons! Oh! I know I could be a good mother!"

She was in Heaven to-morrow, the dear little innocent soul, and one of the babies went with her. I was glad that the little baby went too. For I remembered that she had said then she would have all she wanted; because it troubled me to think that, for all his grief to-day, bennis wouldn't be like any other man in the world if he didn't marry to-morrow; and the other wife would have the long life with him, and become dearer and dearer, and Louie would fade into just a beautiful dream, and when the next life came, it would be the dear wife of the long-continuing time that would be his companion, at Louie would be all alone if it wasn't for the baby, and she had said that the baby was enough. Of course all this was only a sort of hash through my consciousness, not any deliberate thought. Nobody could have thought about anything of the kind who saw Dennis's grief. He was all beside himself. I don't like to tell you what he said and did; I was half afraid sometimes that a thunderbolt would fall and destroy him; and then again I was afraid that he would destroy himself. I don't know how we ever contrived to get him to let Louie be placed in her casket, and I thought he would jump into the very grave itself. But at last that agonizing time—every moment of which knows how to give a fresh stab—was over, and the worse time came, of the absence and silence, and wild, vain, butter longing. And Dennis couldn't look at the baby. "Take it away!" he said. "It killed her?" So I took him into my own room, and cuddled him close to my heart every night, and every morning he awoke me with his laughing and gurgling and crowing, playwith the shadows of the dancing leaves across the bed; and he had Louie's yellow hair and rosy cheeks and perfect features, her great longing blue eyes, and Dennis's black eyebrows, and every day he grew dearer and dearer, and more inexpressibly dear, and I said to myself that, much as I missed poor Louie, here had been made up to me ail I had failed of in my life; for this child was to take the place to me of mother and isster and husband and child together. And the earre he would, who will ever tak

Perhaps it was an hour afterward when I looked up, and there was Dennis coming through the orchard with the baby, and the boy was crowing and jumping and catching at the bending boughs, and catching at his father's great moustache, and rubbing his little wet lips all over Dennis's face, chirruping and joyous; and I couldn't help it, I ran to meet them.

"You see," said Dennis, as he let me have him back, "blood is thicker than water, after all."

Oh! what a long jourfley I felt as if that baby had been on as I took him and could hardly have done kissing him.

"Come," said Dennis, laughing, "leave something of him for me,"

It was the first time he had laughed since that child was born. And the darling had gone a long journey—a journey into the infinite depths of a lather's heart.

into the infinite depths of a latter's Well, after that, Dennis couldn't get home early enough in the afternoon, and it seemed as if he hated to go away in the morning, and Sundays he had the baby in his arms from morning till night. And in the evenings, when I sat sewing on the little clothes, he would come and sit opposite, or where he could see how the work went on; and he brought home all sorts of little, impossible toys, and he talked and sang to him, and walked with him; and the baby began to look out for his coming as much as I did. And all that, of course, helped me a good deal in my work about the house, for I kept everything as fine and orderly as a honeycomb; only, with the baby to tend and see to, I sometimes had to sit up nights to do it.

"I shall call him Louis, for his mother,"

"I shall call him Louis, for his mother,' said Dennis, one night.

"Do you think you can bear it?" I asked.

"Do you think you can bear it?" I asked.

"To hear him called Louis? Yes. He is Louie over again," said Dennis.
And I couldn't tell you how pleasant life grew to be as we watched the child grow, unfolding like a rose. There was absolutely a sto who should discover his first tooth. When he took his first step, it was between Dennis's arms and mine, as we both sat on the floor. And when he spoke his first word, how we listened to learn if it were Dennis's name or mine. The day wan't long enough for us to watch his dear loveliness in. And I think Dennis was envious of me for having him nights; but he couldn't help that.

I never shall forget, though, the night the baby had the croup, and we both lung over him, fearing every breath would be the last; and, when ease came, how we both broke down and cried together; and as we looked out the window and saw the first flush of dawn and the waning moon and the morning star, glittering out of it with an ineffable brightness, that star seemed to be shining on some herald angel's forehead.

So time went on; and I thought then it and the morning star, glittering out of it with an ineffable brightness, that star seemed to be shining on some herald angel's forchead.

So time went on; and I thought then it would not be easy to say how we could be happier; for even the memory of Louie was softened into something that was hardly a grief to us in our love of her boy, though sometimes I used to wonder if the little fellow that went with her was sweet as the one that staid with us.

But when the dear child was about three years old, there came a snake into Eden. A snake? A whole nest of them! It seemed as if every girl in the whole village had just found out what a rare and charming person I was, and how pleasant it was, late afternoons, up where I lived, and how nice it was to run up evenings to see me. And sometimes Dennis would have to go home with them then; and sometimes he wouldn't, but just went out the other way, and never came home till they'd gone; and, somehow, one thing was almost as unpleasant as the other, and I couldn't say why it worried me—I only knew it did. And I used to take the boy and go off by myself and cry. For, of course, sooner or later, Dennis would marry some one of those terrible girls; he couldn't help himself; it would come about after awhile as naturally as water runs down hill.

And then there would be a stepmother for my boy, and Heaven alone knew what would become of him. And what would become of me?

And all at once it came over me in a flash of horror and shame what was the matter with me; and then I felt that, happen what would, I really must go away.

But I couldn't go and leave the boy; and there I was. And I grew pale and could eat nothing, and was stiller and stiller every day. I could as soon have talked Hebrew as have smiled.

But one day I had the little fellow asleep in his morning map, which he had not there I was. And I grew pale and could eat nothing, and was stiller and stiller every day. I could as soon have talked Hebrew as have smiled.

But one day I had the little fellow asleep in his morning map, which he had not quite outgrown, although it was getting to be short and fitful: and, thinking that Dennis was there to see, or knowing he was, and thinking nothing, I went out by myself, down the field by the railroad cut; for there was an apple-tree there where I gathered the wind-falls, and I liked, too, to sit on the bank and see the train dash by in the cut. I had my apron full of apples, and, as I came back, I stood loitering a moment or so on the steep bank, hearing a train coming, and liking all the rush and roar and rattle that seemed to snatch me out of myself, as if it told of a way to somewhere, some distant region where my trouble might be forgotten; and all at once another sound from that of the approaching train caught my ear, a glad, gay shouting and crying. I threed and looked to right and left, a little confused, for it was the child's voice. And, turning back suddenly, I saw him; and there, at the foot of the bank, in the very center of the railway track, stood the little fellow, who had crept from his bed and ran after me, and been beguiled down the slope by some blossoms that he saw there—there, in the center of the track he stood, waving his little hands and shouting to the coming train. There was not a half minute, it seemed; but in less time I was down there, and was just grasping the child when my foot slipped, and I fell with him in my arms, and the thunder was in my ears and the hot breath in my face, and I knew that was the end.

No; it was only the beginning of the end.

and the thunder was in my ears and the hot breath in my face, and I knew that was the end.

No; it was only the beginning of the end. When I knew anything more, I was lying on the bank in Dennis's arms; for he had come bounding after the boy, and had snatched us both out of danger as the engine, like a wild dragon, whizzed and roared and thundered by, and he was holding me as if he would never let me go.

And he never let me go. "Oh!" he cried, "I found out in that one second what life would be to me without you, dear; something I couldn't bear a day." And I only clung to him, too ashamed to let him see my face, too tired and weak to lift it. And so it is I that am the second wife, and the boy's mother. And I suppose everybody was surprised; but nobody, as I told you, was half as much surprised as I.—[New York Independent.

THE KEY.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

An unknown singer sang a joyful song; A few light-hearted listeners had he, Who paused, responsive to his notes of glee, Then tripped away to mingle with the throng.

He sang of fame. One traveller, no more, Who sought for glory on the heights, drew near, And for a moment lent attentive ear, Then hurried on, thrice swifter than before.

He sang of sorrow; and a mournful train Listened in sail-eyed silence to his song, Then wrung each other's hands, and passed along Their half-healed wounds re-opened by his strain.

He sang of love; and kings and peasants came And flung their gold and homage at his feet. All had known love, and all had found it sweet. And lot the singer held the key to fame.

Great Men-Michael Davitt. To the Editor of the Graphic:

Great men are not the mere accidents of their time, but rather the instruments which God has made to achieve noble ends in the interests of humanity. The average man with a negative or defective character, man with a negative or defective character, allows or hastens the demoralization of society, introduces or submits to unhealthy laws and customs in government, and becomes a propagandist or a follower of false theories in the still more sacred cause of religion. It is when the mission and influences of such men imperil the safety of society, that great men, like beacon lights, present themselves to guide the people, and point out the iniquitous system which threatens their destruction. Slavery in America had become a recognized institution, covered and upheld by the sanction of law, until a few good and great men appeared on the scene to attack the monster evil, and protest against a wrong to humanity and to God. Phillips, Garrison and Sumner would accept no compromise, while a single fetter bound the hands or the title of a slave, or interfered with that birthright of freedom which should be sacred to every human being.

The people of Ireland have for centuries been protesting against the tyranny of the British government, and the iniquitous system of alien landlordism, and from time to time some great men have come to the front as ad ocates of the people's rights.

Thus Grattan and O'Connell labored in allows or hastens the demoralization of so-system of anen landerdusin, and from time to time some great men have come to the front as ad ocates of the people's rights.

Thus Grattan and O'Connell labored in their day to sow the seeds of liberty, and teach the people that right was a principle too sacred to be invaded by might. So it is today with the subject of our sketch, Michael Davitt. He is the great man, who, a few years ago, when the people of Ireland were goaded with oppressive laws and extortionate rents, was the first to raise his voice against the system which authorized them, and formulate through the medium of the Land League, which he founded, a sentiment in favor of self government for Ireland, that made itself so generally manifest not only in Ireland, but through out Great Brittain at the last general election. His genius and patriotism are not the only elements which mark his true greatness, for besides these qualities, his wonderful industry as a student of important economic and national questions, has given to him a world wide reputation as one of the most logical thinkers and writers of the day. It is his reputation in this respect, together with that admiration in which he is held as an uncompromising patriot, that has given such a wide popularity to the letter he has written for the press, and has caused thinking men of every nationality to listen with interest to his speeches. Few men in public life in the world to-day have had the privilege of speaking to such large audiences as greeted him in England and Ireland, and we believe a like testimony of admiration will be shown him during his travels in this country.

Unveiling the Bartholdi Statue.

Unveiling the Bartholdi Statue.

The following account of the unveiling of the Bartholdi Statue is from a private letter from a former Newton lady, and it contains so much of general interest that permission for its publication has been permission for its publication has been given:

"It was a wonderful event, despite the wretched weather; it was worth the journey just to see the people. Stores, houses, stoops and sidewalks everywhere were packed. The procession was first late, then long. There seemed no end to the military, marine, firemen and police, the last, from Philadelphia, were a grand crowd—a corps of giants, all marching in perfect time. They made the New York and Brooklyn "cops" look like pigmies, and everybody applanded. The line of firemen seemed interminable and contained the most novel features. One old engine of 1811 and another of 1790 looked very old. One of the wagons carried in front a lady dressed in national regalia, to represent Columbia, and in the rear an Indian Princess clad in aboriginal attire. Another wagon bore a perfect, life-sized image of the goddess, made of colored immortelles; a flower figure of a fireman in full rig was also a striking feature, as he seemed to be dashing over the ladder. There was a great display of artillery, and the mounted officers looked finely.

The Frenchmen were numerous, and tried to seem very jubilant in the drizzling rain. We stood nearly three hours on the curb and saw about half of the pageant.

The Frenchmen were numerous, and tried to seem very jubilant in the drizzling rain. We stood nearly three hours on the curb and saw about half of the pageant. The New York hero of fires, old Harry Howard, came limping along, half paralyzed, and was loudly cheered. At length we went down to the wharf and started off on the Grand Republic about 2 p. m.. The sight down the harbor was wonderful; boats of all kinds, shapes and sizes were perfectly alive with people. We stopped opposite the Goddess and saw the hundreds of vessels going every way, and watched the scores of sailors in the menof-war as they ran up the rigging and stood on the yards. We watched the flashes from the port-holes and then nerved ourselves for the tremendous booming which followed. It hought I had heard noise before, but I never knew anything what it meant until I heard this crashing and banging of cannon on all sides of us. The Goddess would disappear in the smoke, and then come sailing out of the clouds again so distinctly and clear that she seemed to typify the spirit of liberty coming in dignity and triumph out of the very din and smoke ôf battle.

The ceremonies all went crooked, they say. They fired a salute when the President began to speak and another volley when Dr. Storrs began to pray. M. Bartholdi took down the veil at the wrong time, and in his general delight and enthusiasm, turned and kissed a man standing near. Of course, we could have no definite knowledge of anything but noise and confusion. I survived all day on a ham sandwich, which cost a desperate struggle to secure.

secure.

We reached home at night tired, hungry, wet enough, and willing to be excused from the fire-works which were to come off when the elements would permit. Altogether it was racket and slam bang enough to last a good while."

The First Sign

Of falling health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedles prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Aver's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Serofula, and know, if it is taken fathfully, that it will thoroughly radicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A REVOLUTION IN COOKING.

A REVOLUTION IN COOKING.

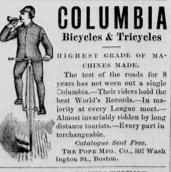

Pure air is as necessify in the cooking of food as in its assimilation after it is caten. Air to be pure must be kept in motion. This law is one from which nature never varies, and steady currents of fresh air surround our globe, driving away the vitiated productions of respiration, and furnishing every breathe.

The same law of nature governs all the principles and practice of cooking. Meat and bread in cooking give out deleterious gases which are re-absorbed in the ordinary range oven, producing anhealthful food, besides diminishing the weight and shrinking the substance of the articles cooked. The Wire drawer borr revolutionizes all this, by keeping up a charm of the cooking, and meats are roasted and bread baked in accordance with natural laws. No odors come into the room, less fuel is required, and tough meats are made tender. Bread baked with the Wire Gauze Door does not mould, and ples and cakes keep fresh for a long time.

The Stoves and Ranges, and all imitations and substitutes are worthless, as it is the Gauze that produces the results, and no other range can use this. Sold by dealers everywhere. Special circulars glady sent on application.

—On Friday morning the 19th, there passed from earth, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hartshorne, Institution avenue, Deacon Jacob Rowe of East Gloucester, Maine, in the eighty-first year of his age; his illness was very brief, he having been in usual health and activity on the Tuesday previous, but his system failed to sustain a sudden and an acute attack of an inflammatory nature. The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon at tour o'clock, Rev. Dr. Hovey leading, and giving a brief history of Dea. Rowe's faithful Christian life and self denying labors in connection with the East Gloucester, Me., Baptist church, of which Dr. Hovey was once pastor, when he was a young man. The scripture selections which were read were those strong rich promises which fell like a halo of sunset glory around this closing scene in pilgrimage of this venerable man of God. The burial took place the following day at his home in Maine. Rev. Charles W. Rowe, a graduate of Newton Theological Institution, and held in high esteem by the churches, is a son of Dea. and Mrs. Rowe, the latter of whom remains, advanced in years, to dwell with her daughter.

—On Sunday evening at the Unitarian church the sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Andrew P. Peabody of Cambridge. A large audience was present, including professors from the hill, students, and worshippers from other churches. The opening service was an organ voluntary by Miss Bassett, singing by the congregation, and responsive reading of the scripture, Rev. Mr. Wheeler, pastor, leading; prayer by Dr. Peabody, and sermon from the text. "But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptible apparel of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." Subject, "Character." "There are characters with great moral leaks through which all that is valuable is running away. There are men today with such short comings, that we would fain hope that they are hypocrites, that their hearts are better than their lives. But, alas! it is the good and the true that are counterfeited, the base and the false never. We see worshippers of beauty, of art and millinery, who are not very celligious, whose characters have no desirable fragrance. Men on a low plane work and fight for a creed, or dogma, and the more they fight, the more they love their error; their lives are sectarian soul traps. Hidden things are often the most valuable, roots hidden deep in the earth sustain and nourish the mighty oak, so we find men unostentatious, who have within their souls so much of kindness, of purity, of truth, that the very atmosphere in which they live seems charged with it. Men who live up to their ideal, who are what they hope to see in others. Make your life an atmosphere of truth, and prayer. Believe, and to faith add works. Sin is the only thing man needs to be saved from, and that is Christ's mission. So let us live that we may be perfect before the throne of God. Dr. Peabody, though quite advanced in years, speaks with much carnestness, his very personality testifying to his faith in the power of the words he utt

The Republican Convention.

The Republican convention met at the City Hall, Tuesday evening, and was called to order by Mr. C. Bowditch Coffin, chairman of the ward and city committee. Hon, R. R. Bishop of Ward 6 was nomina-Hon. 16. R. Bishop of Ward 6 was nomina-ted for permanent chairman, and on as-cending the platform thanked the conven-tion for the honor, and said that the con-vention had met to transact as important business as can devolve upon citizens, and he trusted it would be done in a manner to reflact neglit more the sits.

he trusted it would be done in a manner to reflect credit upon the city. Mr. C. B. Coffin was nominated for Secretary, and the convention was ready for business. Messrs. Pickard of Ward 4, Curry of Ward 5 and Smead of Ward 2 were appointed a committee on credentials, and reported that the list of delegates was full, every delegate being present. Following are the delegates elected:

Ward One. C. B. Coffin, H. E. Cobb, F. G. Barnes, Charles H. Stone, S. W. Tucker, Ward Two. John A. Fenno, Joseph Byers, E. W. Green, George L. Churchill, Ellin, Smead.

Ward Three. J. T. Allen, L. G. Pratt, L. Hosmer, V. E. Carpenter, F. E. Crockett.

Ward Four. W. H. Blood, C. C. Burr, Fred Johnson, E. L. Pickard, L. E. Leland. Ward Five. E. J. Hyde M. G. Crane, S. G. Curry, Eben Thompson, C. H. Noyes. Ward Six. A. D. S. Bell, Avery L. Rand, E. T. Colburn, E. H. Mason, R. R. Bishop. Ward Seven. Warren P. Tyler, Isaae T. Burr, William P. Ellison, S. A. D. Sheppard, George T. Coppins.
Chairman Bishop said that the first business was the nomination of a candidate for Mayor.
Mr. W. P. Tyler presented the name of Alderman Samuel L. Powers of Ward 7, and Mr. Henry E. Cobb moved that a ballot be taken. Mr. Crane of Ward 5 suggested an informal ballot, but this was voted down 18 to 15.
Messrs. Leland of Ward 4, Byers of Ward 2 and Colburn of Ward 6 were appointed a committee to collect and count the ballots and the-vote was taken with the following result:
S. L. Powers, 21: J. Wesley Kimball, 9; George Pettee, 5. Mr. Powers was declared the nominee with moderate applause.
Candidates for the board of aldermen were next called for, and Mr. Cobb nominated J. Edward Hollis, the present councilman from Ward 1, and Mr. Mason of Ward 5 moved that he be nominated by acclamation, which was done.
Mr. John A. Fenno said his delegation was a unit in favor of Mr. A. R. Mitcheil, who had been the choice of the caucus.
Mr. W. P. Ellison of Ward 7 moved that Mr. B. S. Grant, the present alderman from Ward 2, be nominated. He had served for three years and was an excellent official.
Mr. Byers of Ward 2 said that he believed in fair play, and that when a ward presented a candidate unanimously, its choice should be respected by the convention. Mr. Mitchell was a man of unblemished reputation, and no one could say a word against him. Mr. Grant had voluntarily retired last year but had failed to stand by his ag reement and now the same story was repeated again because he had failed in his political plots and plans for some other office.
Mr. Mitchell has not solicited the nomination for alderman; he was a large owner of real estate in the ward, paid heavy taxes, while Mr. Grant had

Mr. Fenno said that the question was unwarranted, and Mr. Ellison had no right to ask it.

Mr. Henry E. Cobb said that the question was warranted. Delegates came in here for personal reasons, and take part in the doings when they do not intend to support the nominees. No honest men would do such a thing. It was the duty of the delegates to accept the verdict of the majority and support the nominee. That might be old-fashioned doctrine, but it was what any honest man would do. It was time the Republican party took a stand on this question, and this convention should set an example to other conventions both state and national. The minority should accept the verdict of the majority and men had no business to go to a convention unless they would-promise beforehand to accept whatever nomination might be made and work for its success at the polls.

This speech was directed against Ward 2 but it proved a boomerang, as it brought out the fact that the delegates from Ward 5 were elected on the understanding that they would refuse to vote for Mr. Powers. Mr. Elliott J. Hyde said that the delegation from his ward were pledged to vote for Mr. Kimball and gave the cancus notice that they would not vote for Mr. Powers, and they were elected with that understanding.

Mr. Curry was the only delegate from the ward who dissented from Mr. Hyde. He said he came there pledged to vote for Mr. Rimball, but he accepted the dictate of the majority.

Mr. Byers of Ward 2 said he stood just where he did before. He came unpledged and no one had any business to dictate to him as to whom he should vote. He did not approve of Mr. Ellison's position. As for Mr. Mitchell, if anyone knew anything to his discredit let him say it.

Mr. Corbb said let the delegation promise to support Mr. Powers, if they want Mr. Mitchell nominated.

Mr. Oobb said let the delegation promise to support Mr. Powers, if they want Mr. Mitchell nominated.

Mitchell nominated.

Mr. W. T. Logan of Ward 5 said he had been born and brought up a Democrat, but when he came to Newton he had joined the Republican party, as it seemed to him the most respectable and in favor of the best methods. But he did not consider that a delegate was bound to support a nomice simply because he was a Republican and had been nominated. A delegate had the same rights as other men had to vote for the best candidate. Each ward had a right to name the man to represent them, and it was simply justice to Ward 2 to nominate Mf. Michell.

Mr. C. C. Burr of Ward 4 said that an alderman was an officer of the city and not of the ward and the convention had a right to say who should be chosen. He knew Mr. Mitchell personally, and if he were the only candidate would be glad to vote for him. But Mr. Grant was an excellent official, of recent experience, and he should be nominated.

Alderman Mason said that both Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Grant were friends of his, and had been associated with him in the city government, but there were to be so many new men in the board of aldermen that he thought Mr. Grant should be retained, especially as he had been one of the best officials in the board.

Mr. Ellison moved to proceed to ballot, and Mr. Grant received 19 votes, Mr. Mitchell 15, and the former was declared the nomineee.

From Ward 5 Dr. Crockett nominated nomineee.

From Ward 5 Dr. Crockett nominated Mr. J. H. Nickerson, the present alderman, and he was nominated by acclamation.

Mr. Burr of Ward 4 said that he was sorry to announce that Alderman Fiske had refused to serve again, on account of his health and for business reasons. He therefore moved to nominate Frederic Johnson, the present councilman from the ward, for Alderman. Mr. Johnson was chosen by acclamation.

From Ward 5 Mr. Craye presented the Adderman. Mr. Johnson was chosen by ac-clamation.

From Ward 5 Mr. Crane presented the name of Alderman Pettee, who was chosen by acclamation.

From Ward 6, Mr. Rand presented the name of Councilman Frank Edmands, as Alderman Mason had positively refused to serve another term. Mr. Edmands was chosed by acclamation.

Mr. Tyler presented the name of Council-man French from Ward 7, and he was chosen by acclamation.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Mr. Bishop said that he had received a letter from a prominent citizen of Ward 3, urging that the convention nominate one or more ladies on the school board, but this the convention was ungallant enough to refuse to do.

For menbers of the board from Ward 5, Mr. Elliott J. Hyde presented the name of Mr. A. B. Putney, one of the present members, and Mr. Walter C. Frost, a gentleman who was well posted on educational matters.

man who was well posted on educational matters.

Mr. J. T. Allen made an eloquent plea for the nomination of a lady as one member, and presented the name of Mrs. K. M. Plipps and Frost be nominated by acciamation, which was done, with a few dissenting votes.

Mr. Ellison moved that Messrs. Putney and Frost be nominated by acclamation, which was done, with a few dissenting votes.

From Ward 6 Mr. Rand said that the caucus had decided on the names of Mr. C. C. Barton, one of the present members, and Rev. B. K. Pierce. Mr. Allen nominated Mrs. A. J. Hawthorne, who had been a distinguished teacher in Boston, and urged the convention to show a liberal and progressive spirit. Mr. Tucker moved that a ballot be taken.

Mr. Hyde of Ward 5 said that his ward and Ward 6 were in the same school district, and his ward favored the renomination of Mr. W. D. Philbrick, as an endorsement of what he had done for the schools. He had seven children in the public schools, and so had actual knowledge of what the schools needed.

Mr. Crane of Ward 5 also endorsed Mr. Philbrick, and said that he had done good work in bringing up the schools in that ward to a high degree of efficiency. He himself was interested in the matter, as he sent five children to the schools of the city, and Mr. Philbrick sent one more. He was a graduate of Harvard, a practical man and Ward 5, was pleased with him.

Mr. Rand thought Ward 6 had a right to name its candidates, and said that Mr. Philbrick did not get a vote in the caucus. Mr. Allen thought that as the school committee were officers of the city, it was entirely proper for other wards to present names.

A vote was then taken, and Mr. Barton account of the caucus of the city, the was the school of the caucus of the city, and the proper for other wards to present names.

A vote was then taken, and Mr. Barton received 30; Dr. Pierce, 20; Mrs. Hawthorne, 7, and Mr. Philbrick 11. Messrs. Barton and Pierce were declared the nomines.

From Ward 7, Mr Ellison presented the name of Rev. G. W. Shiun, and Mr. Fenno of Ward 2 said that it was an honor for any man to have a chance of voting for Dr. Shiun, and he moved that he be nominated by acclamation, which was done.

Mr. Bishop reminded the members of the convention that their duties were not over, and would not be until the evening of election day and the convention adjourned.
